This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

At a Meeting of the SURTEES SOCIETY, held in Durham Castle on Tuesday, December 6th, 1904, the Very Reverend the Dean of Durham in the Chair—

It was ordered,

That the Register of Archbishop William Wickwane be edited for the Society by Mr. William Brown, the Secretary.

PREFACE.

The register of Archbishop William Wickwane, contained in a volume, formerly covered with a plain light parchment case, was in 1902 bound in citron coloured morocco leather by Messrs. Spottiswoode and Company, binders to the British Museum. The volume consists of 200 folios of parchment, $12 \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Of these folios 22, 23, 27-34, 41-43, 52-55, 61-65, 73, 82, 91-96, 116, and 180, are interpolations; and folios 74-77, 82d, 99, 99d, 100d, 101, 103d, 108d, 110d 111d, 112, 112d, 125, 125d, 131d, 132, 132d, 144, 144d, 153d, 155d, 156, 156d, 160d, 161, 116d, 163, 163d, 164, 165, 165d, 166d, 167, 167d, 177, 183d, 186d, 187, 187d, 199d, and 200, are blank. The volume is divided into two parts. The second part begins at page 97 and is a duplicate of the first, although differently arranged. The handwriting in both copies is the same, and the differences, most of which are given in the notes, are unimportant. The foliation which has been followed is that imposed when the volume was rebound, and will be found written in pencil in the lower left hand corner of each folio.

The editor of this volume desires to return his thanks to Mr. H. A. Hudson, Registrar of the Archbishop of York, for free access to the MS., and facility for copying it; to Mr. A. Hamilton Thompson, for much help; and to the Rev. Canon J. T. Fowler, of Durham, for copying the document giving an account of the discovery of Archbishop Wickwane's tomb, in 1669. The editor has to apologize for an unusual number of press errors.

INTRODUCTION.

Of the life of William Wickwane, who succeeded Walter Giffard as archbishop of York in 1279, very little is known prior to his elevation to that dignity. His name is spelt Wygwane (No. 673), Wykkewane (Annales Monastici (Rolls Series), iii., 281, iv., 305), Wykewane or Wikewane (Ibid., iii., 323), and Giffard's Register, 134), Wickwane (Ibid., iii., 392), Wykwan (Chronicon de Lanercost, 120), and Wykewan (Historians of the Church of York and its Archbishops (Rolls Series), ii., 407), and Wychewang (Chronicon Walteri de Hemingburgh, ii., 7). Like Thomas of Adderbury and Adam of Bibury he was one of archbishop Giffard's importations from the West Midlands into the diocese of York. The place from which he derived his name is now called Child's Wickham, a small parish in Gloucestershire, close to the borders of Worcestershire, a mile west of Broadway, about five miles south of Evesham, and the same distance west of Chipping Campden. In Domesday (edition 1793, fo. 168, col. 2) it appears as Wicvene; in the Rotuli Hundredorum (i., 170, 172) as Wykewane and Wykewan; in the Testa de Nevill (p. 80, 82), as Wykewanne, and in Pope Nicholas's Taxation (p. 223) as Wykewan. A friend, who lately visited Child's Wickham, writes:—"As to Child's Wickham, it lies about half a mile to the left of the road from Moreton-in-the-Marsh to Evesham. The turning is about a mile south-west of Broadway, and four miles from Evesham. The village is small, and stands on absolutely flat ground in the vale of Evesham; but, east of it, the Cotswolds rise to their highest point above Broadway. There is a good vicarage, but I could see no other house of any importance. The nave of the church has been rebuilt. A rather plain and early Norman west door remains, in front of which the tower, of late 14th or early 15th century work, has been built. There is a handsome spire; but the tower, like that of the neighbouring church of Church Honeybourne, or Leckhampton, near Cheltenham, is very plain, with hardly any windows. The nave has no aisles; near its east end, a very simple Norman arch, without mouldings, and springing from impost blocks, leads into a northern transeptal chapel, in the north wall of which is a narrow two-light window with a cusped circle in the head, certainly contemporary with Archbishop Wickwane and the Abbot of Winchcombe. The chancel has also been rebuilt; but there are dwarf columns about 5 feet high, in its eastern angles, from which a string-course runs westward along the north and south walls, and finishes in the abaci of two similar columns, one on each side. These seem to be old, c. 1190-1200; but the light was very bad. The arrangement is curious, and reminds me of the arrangement in the chancel at Hilton, near Yarm. There is only one monument, a small 17th century tablet high up on the wall of the transeptal chapel. The inscription was quite invisible from below, and there was no ladder about. At Broadway I saw a monument to one of the Phillippses of Middle Hill, who were lords of the manor of Child's Wickham early in 19th century."

The Wickwane family seem to have been connected with the Abbey of Winchcombe. Walter de Wykwan, possibly a brother of the archbishop, was cellarer of that house, and abbot (1282-1314). John de Wykwan, rector of Bledington, near Stow-on-the-Wold, acted as proctor for the abbey, and Master Jordan de Wicwane appears as witness to a deed about burial at Hayles and to another deed relating to Twining in Lower Kiftsgate Hundred.[1] Only one relative of the archbishop is mentioned in this register, a brother, Robert of Exeter to whom in January, 1282, the archbishop ordered 17½ marks to be paid, the residue of his salary due at Bristol (No. 819). His relations were, if not of humble rank, quite unknown in the diocese. In 1283 he was annoyed to find certain impostors of evil fame going about pretending to be relations and getting board and lodging under the pretence of being related to him (sub umbra nominis nostri). To prevent this the archbishop ordered that nothing was to be given to anyone who could not produce letters from him.[2]

The earliest mention of William of Wickwane is found in the register of Richard of Gravesend, bishop of Lincoln, under the archdeaconry of Buckingham, where are recorded the admission and institution at Reading, on 2 kal. Feb., 6th year (Jan. 31, 1263-4), of Master William de Wyckewane, chancellor of York, to the church of Ivingho, now Ivinghoe, in Buckinghamshire, N.E. of Tring, on the presentation of the bishop of Winchester, vacant by the resignation of Master Suicard, the last rector, an inquisition having been taken thereon by M(atthew) de Stratton, the archdeacon of Buckingham.[1] The bishop of Winchester who presented Wickwane was John de Exonia or Oxonia,[2] or Gernsey, who before his consecration in 1262, had been chancellor of York. Robert of Scarborough, afterwards dean of York, is said to have been possessed of this dignity in 1262, and Wickwane in 1263.[3] The exact date of his appointment as chancellor i uncertain, as the register of archbishop Godfrey de Ludham (1258-1264) has not been preserved.[4] He occurs as chancellor in November, 1267.[5] He does not appear to have figured very prominently during the primacy of Archbishop Giffard. He claimed the prebends of Newbald against Cardinal Ancherus,[6] and there is an undated letter[7] from him to his diocesan, complaining in somewhat querulous terms that he had been robbed of certain fees due to him as chancellor.

On April 28, 1279, three days after the death of Archbishop Giffard,[8] the king committed the custody of the see, during the vacancy, to Thomas de Normanville and Master Henry of Newark, who was afterwards archbishop.[9] The election took place on St. Alban's day (June 22),[10] when

[1] He was succeeded as archdeacon in 1268 by Percival de Lavannia, whose name occurs not infrequently in this register.

[2] In the list of the chancellors of York (Le Neve's Fasti iii., 163) he is called John de Excestria, so it seems he came from Exeter, not Oxford. Could he have been a relative of the archbishop?

[3] Le Neve's Fasti iii., 163.

[4] In Dugdale's Monasticon Anglicanum (v. 341) two documents, relating to the appropriation of the churches of Beckermet and Arlecdon, in Cumberland, to the abbey of Calder both dated in 1262, are said to come from the register of archbishop Godfrey ii., 180 and iii., 1. This is quite inexplicable. It is not likely that Ludham's register ever extended to three parts, as he held office only for six years, and no other archbishop ever had more than two parts to his register. I am indebted to the Rev. James Wilson, Dalston Vicarage, Cumberland, for bringing this under my notice. Dugdale in his Antiquities of Warwickshire refers several times to Bishop Molend's Register at Lichfield, which no longer exists. The references are equally circumstantial and not very probable.

eighteen votes were given to Wickwane, and single votes were cast by him for Master Hugh of Evesham, afterwards cardinal of San Lorenzo in Lucina, by Master Robert of Scarborough, archdeacon of the East Riding and afterwards dean of York, for Master Thomas de Wythen, archdeacon of York, and by Master Thomas of Hedon for Master Thomas of Corbridge, a brother canon, and later on archbishop. Ultimately Wickwane was unanimously chosen.[1] On July 4 the king signified to the pope his assent to the election.[2] On his arrival at Viterbo, whither he had gone for consecration, Pope Nicholas III. referred the question of the validity of his election to a bishop whose see has not been identified,[3] and to G., cardinal priest of St. Mark, and Matthew, cardinal deacon of Sta Maria in Porticu. On their report the election was quashed, apparently for some defect in procedure,[4] which was remedied by the pope, who himself appointed Wickwane, so that the see should not remain vacant longer than was absolutely necessary. The date of the document (No. 740) is September 19, 1279, and Stubbs, who very possibly got his information from Wickwane's Register, says the archbishop was consecrated on this day. Certain entries[5] however in this register show that this event must have taken place a couple of days earlier, on 15 kal. Oct. (Sept. 17). Of his journey across Europe there is no record, but with his arrival in England his troubles commenced. A claim had long been made by the archbishops of York to have their cross carried before them as a mark of their primacy, whilst travelling through the province of Canterbury, a pretension which had always been strenuously resisted by the southern primate. The pope, who had foreseen this trouble, had besought John Peckham, the archbishop of Canterbury, in a private letter (littera clausa), not to enter into a contest as to the right of the archbishop of [4] The defect in procedure is definitely stated in No. 740, "quia omnis collacio reperiebatur omissa," whatever this may mean (Graystanes (Hist. Dunelm. Scriptores Tres. (Surtees Soc. ix.), 36) says the pope quashed William Stichill's election to the see of Durham because "non fuit facta communiter ab omnibus, sed singulariter a singulis; et ideo non per inspirationem." Does this throw any light on the objection to Wickwane's election?

[5] See No. 249, dated Sept. 16, which is the last entry in one of the archbishop's episcopal years, and No. 393, dated Sept. 17, which commences a year.

York to carry his cross erect in the southern province, and commended Wickwane to his notice, as coming to his see with the pope's benediction.[1] The appeal had little influence with the archbishop of Canterbury. Wickwane, after crossing the Channel, carrying his cross erect in the mid passage, where the province of Canterbury presumably began, proceeded in the same manner through the diocese.[2] All went quietly till he got to Rochester, when Master Adam de Hales, the official of the archbishop of Canterbury, and his fellows, stopped him and broke the cross. The archbishop, however, very soon caused another one to be erected, and proceeded on his way to London. On his arrival at the capital he found a large force of armed men awaiting him; and if it had not been for the assistance of numerous friends who came to meet him, he would not have been able to go and pay fealty to the king for the temporalities of his see.[3] Not content with these insults, the archbishop of Canterbury subjected all places through which the northern primate should pass with his cross erect to an interdict, and forbade any one to have dealings with him. This excommunication was ordered to be published in the villages between London and Royston (No. 586), so as to give Wickwane as much annoyance as possible whilst travelling home along the North Road. The interdict does not seem to have impeded his progress, as he was able to travel from London to Royston in one day,[4] reaching Scrooby on Oct. 7, and York on the 14th. His enthronement took place on Christmas Day, 1279, when extensive preparations were made to celebrate that event.[5]

[2] See Letters from Northern Registers, 59-63, Nos. 463 and 586, and Annales Monastici iv., 281. Wickwane's injunctions to his clergy and religious to use the York Use is probably due to his wish to maintain the independence of the Northern Province (Nos. 256, 724). It was doubtless owing to the same jealousy of encroachment that, during the long interregnum after archbishop Rogers' death, the dean of York petitioned Clement III. to order the observance of the York use throughout the diocese (Historians of the Church of York iii., 85, 86).

Some time in 1279, probably on this occasion, archbishop Peckham promised the king he would abstain from interdicting the sale of victuals to the archbishop of York when coming to the king (Cal. of Close Rolls (1272-1279), p. 582). This undertaking did not prevent Peckham from acting in the same way to Wickwane's successor, John Romanus, in 1286 (No. 929). See also No. 929.

The new archbishop was in every respect a great contrast to his predecessor.[1] Giffard had been a man of stately presence, and a lover of company and good cheer, and yet chaste as well, though rendered somewhat weak and fretful by excessive corpulence. Wickwane was the very opposite, meagre, austere, and frugal, yet, as the Lanercost chronicler somewhat grudgingly admits, as far as could be seen from outward appearance, a holy man and one with a very tender conscience.

His stern, unbending nature, which led him to insist upon his rights to their fullest extent, caused him many troubles. Besides the dispute with Canterbury there was another with his suffragan, the powerful bishop of Durham, which was rendered more acute by his unwise conduct. The bishops of Durham had always resisted, or at least evaded, visitations by their metropolitan at York. Archbishop Giffard, by the exercise of a good deal of tact, had been able to make a visitation of the prior and chapter of Durham, but only in a very qualified way.[2] This method of procedure did not satisfy Wickwane. When he had been in office rather more than a year, he gave notice that he intended to hold a metropolitical visitation of the diocese of Durham on the morrow of St. John the Baptist's day (June 25), 1281.[3] Appeals were at once made against the intended visitation by the bishop on the ground of partiality, as suits were depending between him and the archbishop, and on the further grounds that none of his predecessors had ever exercised such right of visitation, and that before doing so he must, according to a constitution of Innocent IV., first visit his own chapter at York which he had neglected to do. The grounds of appeal by the prior and convent of Durham were very similar. They alleged in addition, as shewing prejudice, the refusal of the archbishop to institute Master Adam of Barnby, their nominee, to the living of West Rounton, and his encroachments upon their jurisdiction in Howdenshire and Allertonshire.[1] The archbishop paid no attention to these remonstrances, and notwithstanding an appeal from the king on behalf of the prior and convent,[2] proceeded northward to hold the visitation. He reached Sherburn, near Durham, on June 24, when he ordered Barnby to be instituted,[3] and thus did away with one of the causes of appeal. On his entry into the city he was courteously met by the prior, who took him to his house, where he was entertained in a very splendid manner and received handsome presents, with the object, however, of inducing him to refrain from his visitation.[4] The archbishop could not be persuaded to forego any of his rights, but endeavoured to get into the churchyard with the idea of entering the cathedral by the north door. He was, however, driven back by a crowd of knights from different parts of the bishopric. The archbishop was in no wise daunted, but, standing in the open space in front of the cathedral, now known as the Palace Green, clothed in his canonicals, after a weighty address to the bystanders, he fulminated a solemn excommunication against the bishop, prior, and chapter, and all others impeding his visitation.[5] The excommunication seems to have had no effect, and been a mere brutum fulmen. Divers law proceedings took place, and ultimately in Jan., 1283-4, the sentence of excommunication was revoked by the prior of Barnwell, the archdeacon of Northampton, and the chamberlain of the monastery of Bury St. Edmunds, sitting at the Church of All Saints, Northampton as papal delegates.[6]

After the death of bishop Robert de Insula on June 7, 1283, the archbishop again tried to effect a visitation at Durham. This time, in consequence of the vacancy of the see, the opposition was led by the prior and convent. On

This excommunication was to be published in the dioceses of Carlisle and Whithorn, and Lincoln, because the prior of Durham had a cell at Stamford in the last diocese (No. 456). It was to be published in the churches in Howdenshire and Allertonshire in Yorkshire, of which the prior and convent of Durham were the patrons (No. 459). The text of his discourse was "Descendi ut viderem Judæam et Jerusalem" (Chronicon Walteri de Hemingburgh ii., 7). There seems to be no such passage in the Vulgate. Perhaps the archbishop invented it in order to expound it allegorically. Jerusalem and Durham are remarkably alike in both being what Freeman called "peninsular strongholds," though there is very little water in the ravines or valleys around Jerusalem.

the arrival of the archbishop on July 3 he was not allowed to enter the cathedral, but had to go to St. Nicholas Church, where he proposed to excommunicate the prior and chief men in the chapter. This so irritated certain young men in the town that they cut off one of the ears of his horse, and, but for the intervention of Wiscard de Charron and Peter de Thoresby would, as was believed, have killed him. He was glad to escape by a secret way down some steps to the schools and along the Wear to Kepier.[1]

This second affray much exasperated the archbishop against the see of Durham, just at a time when his services were very necessary. Anthony Bek, who had been archdeacon of Durham and canon of Ripon and Southwell, as well as mediator between Wickwane and bishop Insula, was elected bishop of Durham on July 9, 1281,[2] and had the temporalities restored to him on Sept. 4.[3] The difficulty was to persuade the archbishop to consecrate his new suffragan. With the object of conciliating him, Bek, who was a very wealthy man, undertook to pay all the expenses connected with the translation of the remains of St. William from the mean position they had occupied in York Minster to a shrine worthy of them.[4] This generosity on Bek's part to the mother church of the province, coupled with the pressing solicitation of the king, overcame the archbishop's reluctance. The translation and consecration took place on the same day, the fifth of the ides of January (Jan. 9), 1283-4, in York Minster, in the presence of the king and queen and many of the chief men of the country.[5] Although the archbishop had been prevailed upon to consecrate Bek, his feelings against the prior and convent of Durham remained as bitter as ever. On the day following Bek's consecration

[4] A loco infimo quo diutius receptæ fuerant, Divina favente clementia, transferre intendimus; et in celebri capsula, ut condecet, in eadem ecclesia venerabiliter collocare (Letters from Northern Registers, p. 81). See also No 723. Hemingburgh (Chronicon ii., 14) says the shrine was made of silver and gold. Bek's brother, Thomas, bishop of St. David's, who had been consecrated by Wickwane (Annales Monastici (Rolls Series) iv., 478), had defrayed the cost of the translation of St. Hugh of Lincoln (Historians of the Church of York ii., 407), which had taken place on Oct. 6, 1281 (Chronicon Walteri de Hemingburgh ii., 8).

[5] This date is confirmed by the archbishop (No. 723), who says the translation was to take place on the Sunday after the Epiphany, which in 1283-4 fell on Jan. 9. See also Chronicon de Lanercost, p. 113. Robert de Graystanes (Tres Scriptores, p. 64) says it was on Sunday near Christmas.

he endeavoured to make him excommunicate them, but Bek would in no wise agree, objecting that he had been consecrated their bishop the day before and could not be expected to excommunicate them the day following.[1] To his latest hour Wickwane regretted that he had ever agreed to consecrate Bek.[2] It was not till a year later he issued a mandate to the archdeacon of York to enthrone Bek in his cathedral.[3]

Besides his quarrels with Canterbury and Durham the archbishop was not without troubles in his own diocese. At Beverley, where he was the chief lord, there was a dispute between him and the burgesses about common of pasture (No. 605). An appeal from the Beverley people for help to Canterbury was promptly answered by a sentence of excommunication (No. 47); and it was only after some of the more prominent of his opponents had undergone penance in St. John's, Beverley, and York Minster (No. 49), that an agreement was come to (No. 708).

Wickwane was accused of oppressing those under his sway, and Cardinal Hugh of Evesham,[4] whom Wickwane had wished to make archbishop of York, thought these complaints were not without foundation (Nos. 480, 483). As regards exactions and oppressions by his officers, the archbishop certainly had done his best to restrain them. The apparitor of the Court of Christianity at York was removed for extortion (No. 505)[5], and his official was rebuked for partiality in exercise of his office (No. 513). That such rebukes were not unnecessary is shewn by the petition from the clergy of the deanery of Holderness (No. 606), who alleged that the official of the archdeacon of the East Riding, by his exactions, had milked the church dry in that district;

[1] Scriptores Tres, p. 64.

[2] Chronicon de Lanercost, p. 122.

[3] Le Neve (Fasti iii., 288) says the document is in Wickwane's Register, but there is nothing like it, or of so late a date, in the Register in its present state. The document in question is dated at Pontoyse, 7 kal. Marcii, anno 6 (Feb. 23, 1284-5). The date is probably correct, as Robert de Graystanes (Scriptores Tres, 69) says Bek was enthroned in Durham Cathedral on the eve of the Nativity, 1285; and, although he gives the wrong year letter, A instead of G, Monday, the day of the week, is correct. The date is interesting as it occurs in the latest document known to have been executed by Wickwane.

[4] The archbishop in a letter written in 1281 gives the cardinal a mysterious warning about not permitting any decoctions or electuaries to be made in his house lest any accident should happen (No. 474). The cardinal was a noted physician. Could the warning have been due to Wickwane's anxiety lest his friend should be accused of poisoning some one? It was a very disturbed time, in which doubtless many mysterious deaths occurred.

not content as his predecessors had been with three or four conveyances, with the local dean and his clerk, he came to hold the chapters of the rural deaneries with a superfluity of conveyances, bringing with him a friend, the rural dean and his clerk, the archbishop's sequestrator, and an apparitor, so that the clergy were oppressed like the children of Israel under Pharaoh. Another example of his care for his clergy appears by his refusal to accept the subsidy to be paid to him by his clergy, except from those who would pay willingly (No. 524).

He had other quarrels besides those mentioned above. The prior and convent of Carlisle, whom he had believed to be friendly to him, got him excommunicated (No. 699)[1], and in some way, not explained, he got into hot water with the collectors of the Tenth for the relief of the Holy Land, and was obliged to make a very humble apology, which he did in very grudging terms (Nos. 695, 928).[2]

If the archbishop was stern and unyielding he certainly did not spare himself. This register shews how zealously he discharged his duty as a bishop. Of the religious houses in his diocese he visited in the spring of 1280, in person or by deputy, twenty-three and a hospital, St. Giles, Beverley. The monasteries visited were Selby, Sinningthwaite, St. Mary's, York, Nostell, Warter, Whitby, Marton, Moxby, Newburgh, Guisbrough, Bridlington, Kirkham, Healaugh Park, Bolton, Drax, Monkbretton, Nun Appleton, Worksop, Newstead, Shelford, Blyth, Cartmel, and Conishead. At St. Mary's, York, Nostell, Warter, and Whitby, all was well (p. 137*n*). At Selby (No. 75), Thomas of Whalley, the abbot appointed by Archbishop Giffard in 1270,[3] was a failure. He wasted the property of the house, was immoral, violent, and resorted to a wizard for help to find the body of his brother who had been drowned in the Ouse (No. 75). As nothing is said about the monks of that house it is probable their morals had greatly improved since the visitation in 1275,[4] when so many of them were accused of immorality. This improvement was general. Only in three cases,

[1] The prior of Durham, who had been appointed by the pope judge in the cause between the prior and chapter of Carlisle and Geoffrey Laurence and others, had caused his commissary, the succentor of Durham, to excommunicate the archbishop (Scriptores Tres, 66).

[2] The purchase of jewels and New Year's gifts in 1282 for the lord of Dublin and Master Ardicio, the collectors of this subsidy, was probably made for the purpose of healing this quarrel (No. 820).

Newburgh, Healaugh Park, and Cartmel (Nos. 184, 427, 440), was a warning against the presence of women in the house necessary, a special exception being made at Newburgh in favour of the patron's wife, who was to be allowed to stay one night. The corrections made by the archbishop after the visitations are most of them after the same pattern, and are very practical. Take as an example the visitation of Bolton Priory, which is the longest (No. 428). After an exhortation to love and good behaviour the archbishop proceeds to give directions for the proper management of the monastic estates. Here, as in nearly every other case, he attempts to prevent the growth of private property, by ordering the locks on the carols and chests to be broken open. Then follow rules for good behaviour, such as not going outside, confessing, not eating or drinking after compline or other improper times, for silence, and repair of ruinous buildings. At Newburgh and Bridlington (Nos. 184, 302) it was necessary to reprove the sporting tastes of the canons, whilst at Kirkham and Bolton (Nos. 303, 428) divine service, especially the chanting, was badly conducted. Great attention seems to have been bestowed on the music, as we find a prior of Warter providing a fund for the purchase of spices to be given as a reward for improvement by the canons of his house in singing the psalms. He laid great stress on long pauses being made in the middle of each verse.[1] Many of the houses suffered from poverty. At Bridlington (No. 317) the dorter and offices were so small the archbishop forbade the reception of any more inmates till after his visitation. At Bolton (No. 428) the church, chapter-house, and buildings were on the point of falling down, and at Healaugh Park (No. 520) the house was so poor that the archbishop besought his official to make his charges for confirming the election of the new prior as light as possible. In the case of the smaller houses, such as Hampole, Yedingham, and Moxby (Nos. 164, 188, 443), to save expense, the visitation or care of the monastery was not exercised by the archbishop in person, but by a deputy.

[1] "Psalmodizantes pausas longiores in medio cujuslibet versus" (No. 306). A friend remarks: "I believe that the great feature of the Solesmes revival of plainsong is the long pause in the middle of the verse. I remember being much struck by the effect of this when hearing convent sing vespers at Maria-Laach five years ago." Prior Wheldrake's resignation is noticed in No. 342.

Marton Priory, a small house of Austin Canons in the forest of Galtres, affords an example of how temporal calamities brought about spiritual degradation. Here the reformation of the house was entrusted to the prior of Newburgh, another house of the same order, who was requested to send three of the inmates of his house to Marton who by their good manner of life should restore its fallen fortunes (No. 444). One of the canons at Marton was so violent and unbearable, it being impossible to find locks of sufficient strength to bind him, that the General Chapter of the Order was commanded to send him to a place of safe custody (No. 445).

The unsatisfactory condition of his clergy caused the archbishop a great deal of anxiety. Very soon after his arrival in his diocese he issued a mandate (No. 61), requiring all the rectors and vicars in his diocese, and others having cures of souls, to be ordained to such orders as their cure required. This seems to have been only imperfectly obeyed. If the institutions for the first year of his pontificate in the important archdeaconries of York and Nottingham are tabulated, it will be found that in the former there were one subdeacon, 5 deacons, 3 priests, and one unspecified, and in the latter 4 subdeacons, 2 deacons, 4 priests, and 4 unspecified. Wickwane certainly strove to improve the condition of affairs. At Hemsworth (No. 60), he required the presentee to be ordained a priest, and removed the parson at Rampton (No. 212) for not having become one. Even in the case of a man of such importance as Baldwin Wake (No. 314), he refused to institute his presentee to Scrayingham as he had not been ordained a priest. Examples of the presentation of clergy in minor orders by religious persons are not wanting. The archbishop himself collated both a subdeacon and a deacon (Nos. 345, 361), and a deacon was provided by the pope (No. 420). It was in consequence of the ignorance and youth of so many of the presentees to livings that so many licences for study had to be granted. These were so numerous that there are special sections, entitled "Licencia" (see pp. 38, 84, 115, 129). The licencee had the option of studying in England or abroad, "citra mare vel ultra" (No. 39), but in one case (No. 204) Paris is specifically mentioned as the place of study.

Non-residence was another question which early engaged the archbishop's attention (No. 496). This matter, as well as plurality and orders, formed part of the inquiries always made at visitations (No. 382). Where possible, the presentee was compelled to resign any other living (Nos. 80, 187, 322, 348), unless he could shew a dispensation allowing him to retain it (No. 213). From two commissions to inquire into the subject of plurality (Nos. 316, 639), it would appear that many dispensations permitting non-residence were issued by the pope. A striking instance of Wickwane's determination to prevent improper persons being thrust into his diocese is afforded by No. 629, where he tells Lewis of Savoy that in spite of the application of the king, whose relation he was, he would not allow him to exchange the prebend he held in York Minster for another in a more convenient place. Against Wickwane's action with regard to Lewis of Savoy may fairly be placed his obsequious conduct on behalf of Napoleone (No. 464), probably a member of the Orsini. Nicholas III. was a member of the same family, so that the compliment to Napoleone was directly addressed to the pope. Giordano, through whom it was transmitted, was one of the Orsini cardinals who were imprisoned by the people of Viterbo in the conclave of 1281. (Gregorovius Gesch. Stadt Rom, Eng. Trans., v. p. 492).

There is little doubt that the form of inquisition, taken on the vacancy of a living (No. 555), was the same as in the time of Archbishop Giffard, in whose register there are many examples, but there is only one specimen in this register, that taken on the occasion of the vacancy of Weston in Nottinghamshire (No. 217). Criminous clerks were another source of trouble. As many persons took minor orders with the object of protecting themselves under the privileges thereby conferred, criminous clerks were not uncommon. One of these privileges was that persons in holy orders could only be tried in ecclesiastical courts, so when the justices itinerant came to try criminal cases, commissaries from the ordinary appeared to claim any clerics who might be put on their trial (Nos. 42, 200). Two conversi of Rufford Abbey were delivered by such commissaries from secular judges and handed over to the ecclesiastical jurisdiction (No. 234). The archbishop was keenly alive to the danger of persons leading a scandalous and vagabond life under the shelter of this privilege, and thus bringing discredit on the clerical character. To obviate this danger he ordained that, unless these clerks should attend school, they were not to look to him for help in their troubles (No. 741). On the other hand the archbishop sternly avenged any infringement of their privileges, as Robert de Berley (No. 122) found to his cost, who, in his capacity as king's bailiff, had executed certain clerks for robbery and other evil deeds.[1]

Cases of immorality, whether by clerks (Nos. 216, 310, 402) or laymen, were sternly punished. Penances, not mere money fines (Nos. 201, 203), were required of the penitents. A person of wealth and importance, like Simon Constable of Burton Constable, in Holderness, and Katherine of Weelsby, widow of John of Danthorpe, whom she was accused of having poisoned,[2] were forced to submit themselves to ecclesiastical censure for supposed immorality (Nos. 312, 340, 512), which seems to have been atoned for by a subsequent marriage (No. 707).

The Register gives a very clear idea of the way Wickwane discharged his duty as diocesan. The itinerary at the end of the volume shews his restless activity in visiting all parts of his diocese, though his movements were a good deal controlled by the necessity of frequently staying at his own manors, as Scrooby, Cawood, Bishopthorpe, Bishop Burton, and Bishop Wilton, where he was certain of finding board and lodging ready for him. Unlike Archbishop Giffard, he never left his province[3] from his entry in November, 1279, till the autumn of 1284, when he left it never to return. His duties were of a very miscellaneous nature. Caring for a recluse near Blyth (No. 235), who was poor and in bad health, and making inquiries about a nun of Nunburnholme (No. 308), who professed a desire to enter a stricter rule, and an order to the parishioners of Bilton-in-the-Ainsty to observe the anniversary of the dedication of their church, are examples. The Crusades, which had engaged a great deal of Archbishop Giffard's attention, are only mentioned in one document (No. 467). With a view of providing a resident clergy, vicarages were instituted at Birstall, Blyth, Mattersey, Sheriff Hutton, Silkstone, Walkeringham, and Whenby. The old quarrel, begun in Giffard's time, about

[3] There is one possible exception, a visit to London at the end of May, 1280 (p. 344). In both folios where the document occurs the place is written Lond', as if for London, though the scribe may have meant to write Loudham, now Lowdham, a village near Nottingham, in which county the archbishop was staying from May 26 till July 4 in that year.

the right of Bogo de Clare to the church of Adlingfleet, claimed by Master Robert of Scarborough, dragged on (Nos. 593, 627). Besides his canonry of York (No. 2), he obtained possession of the church of Settrington, on the presentation of Roger Bigod, earl of Norfolk, though with a proviso he should be ordained priest within a year (No. 372). He long remained an annoyance and a source of trouble in the diocese, and No. 718 gives a recital of his misdeeds in the church of York, apparently as treasurer,[1] at a later period. Richard de Vescy was another scandalous parson whom the archbishop endeavoured to eject from his living. Vescy had been presented to North Ferriby by Lady Agnes de Vescy in 1272[1], but for some reason he fell under Wickwane's censure and was excommunicated (No. 320). Master William of Cliff had been admitted in his place (No. 328), but his entry was forcibly resisted by Vescy and his accomplices, including his son Reginald (No. 329). He did not hesitate to fortify the church, and displayed great violence in expelling the lawful rector (No. 654). Ultimately some arrangement must have been come to, as William de Monceus and Thomas de Romenale were successively instituted to the church of North Ferriby on the presentation of Agnes de Vescy in the spring of 1282 (Nos. 364, 367). Probably Vescy was induced to resign Ferriby by a promise of Escrick, of which he obtained possession in July, 1282 (No. 411). He had already been instituted rector of Escrick under a dispensation for illegitimacy (No. 186), but the living had been sequestrated and he excommunicated (No. 393), and the church declared vacant (No. 730). From this last document it appears he also passed under the name of Kesham.

The items in the accounts near the end of the volume give some small insight into the archbishop's character, and shew him in a milder aspect. He had sporting tastes and got his dogs, couchers, setters, from Normandy (No. 652). When he got them he made provisions both for them and their keeper (Nos. 660, 791). His wine came through Hull (No. 779), and was purchased from Hamund Box,[3] a great merchant there and in London (No. 823). He spent considerable sums on plate and jewels, 20 marks for a couple of pitchers (No. 837), and as much as 74li 7s 4d at one time on jewels (No. 878). St. Ives in Huntingdonshire and Boston were the two fairs at which purchases were made. Wickwane conferred one great benefit on the see of York by the gift of a large head of stock, 602 oxen, 54 horses, and 1,000 sheep, to be kept on the lands of the see, with a proviso that it should be handed on intact by each succeeding archbishop (No. 719).

Full as this register is compared with that of Archbishop Giffard, it by no means records all his activity. Stubbs[1] tells us that Wickwane devoted especial care to see that all the churches in his diocese were duly dedicated. The dedication of only two churches, Loweswater and Lancaster (Nos. 386, 391), both situated in the archdeaconry of Richmond, is mentioned, although there must have been many undedicated churches, as one of the questions at visitations was whether there were any such churches in the archdeaconry (No. 382). From other sources[2] we know that Wickwane dedicated the parish church of Sheffield about 1286, and the abbey church of St. Mary, York, and the parish church of Gilling-in-Ryedale in 1283, but of this nothing is said in the register.

The archbishop as early as the winter of 1282 was hoping to go to Rome, but was prevented by business (No. 922). As time went on this desire grew stronger. No doubt the labours and worries of his office, and the dispute with Durham, told upon him, although in some few cases he was able to ease himself by the employment of Scotch bishops[3] to perform some of his duties. In the summer of 1284 he was able to make arrangements for leaving England. On May 31 in that year he had letters of protection from the king to last three years,[4] and on June 25 he nominated Master Robert of Tadcaster and Hugh of Stapleford as his attorneys to represent him whilst abroad.[5] The exact date of his departure from England is uncertain, or whether he ever reached Rome.[1] Archbishop Peckham heard in December, 1284, that Wickwane was then at Pontigny, and gave orders that he was to be prevented carrying his cross erect through the province of Canterbury as he was expected to attempt before long.[2] Pontigny, a Cistercian Abbey, north of Auxerre, in Burgundy, was one of the earliest off-shoots of Citeaux. The sojourn there of Thomas Becket after his quarrel with Henry II. about the constitutions of Clarendon, and the tomb of St. Edmund Rich of Canterbury,[3] who had died in 1240 at Soisy-en-Brie, close by, had made the place holy for Englishmen. The only information we have of his movements in 1285 is that he dated a document at Pontoise, north of Paris, on Feb. 23.[4] He certainly returned to Pontigny, where he was seized with a mortal illness,[5] according to the Lanercost Chronicler,[6] a fever. The date of his death was the 26th or 27th of August, 1285.[7] His obsequies were celebrated with all the pomp due to his rank and character. He was buried in a lead coffin in the presbytery under a brass, which was destroyed by the Huguenots in the sixteenth century, with an inscription on a sheet of lead "Hic jacet Guillermus Eboracensis Archiepiscopus Angliæ Primas." When his coffin was discovered in 1669, during some alterations in the pavement of the presbytery, besides the above mentioned sheet of lead there were found a small chalice and paten, silver gilt, a cross of copper gilt, a ring of gold, still on the bones of his thumb, on which was engraved Ave Maria gracia plena, and around the head small leaves, silver gilt, which had been ornaments for the mitre.[1] After his death he was looked on as a Saint, and many miracles were reported to have been worked at his tomb.[2] In cases of fever[3] he was reported to be especially useful.[4] It is very likely that in consequence of his repute as a Saint that not long after his death Roger of Malton and Hugh of Methley obtained leave from Archbishop Romanus to go on pilgrimage to Pontigny, where they would have an opportunity of making their prayers at his tomb (No. 911). Bale,[5] on the authority of a certain Nicholas Brigham, "Latinæ linguæ interpres eruditus, in venationibus rerum memorabilium," states that he was author amongst other works of a book called "Memoriale, opus variis doctrinarum generibus refectum."

The following is the description of Archbishop Wickwane's seal, a sulphur cast, from the Catalogue of Seals in the British Museum (I. 369):—"Pointed oval, $3\frac{1}{2} \times 2\frac{1}{8}$ ins. not content as his predecessors had been with three or four conveyances, with the local dean and his clerk, he came to hold the chapters of the rural deaneries with a superfluity of conveyances, bringing with him a friend, the rural dean and his clerk, the archbishop's sequestrator, and an apparitor, so that the clergy were oppressed like the children of Israel under Pharaoh. Another example of his care for his clergy appears by his refusal to accept the subsidy to be paid to him by his clergy, except from those who would pay willingly (No. 524).

He had other quarrels besides those mentioned above. The prior and convent of Carlisle, whom he had believed to be friendly to him, got him excommunicated (No. 699)[1], and in some way, not explained, he got into hot water with the collectors of the Tenth for the relief of the Holy Land, and was obliged to make a very humble apology, which he did in very grudging terms (Nos. 695, 928).[2]

Marton Priory, a small house of Austin Canons in the forest of Galtres, affords an example of how temporal calamities brought about spiritual degradation. Here the reformation of the house was entrusted to the prior of Newburgh, another house of the same order, who was requested to send three of the inmates of his house to Marton who by their good manner of life should restore its fallen fortunes (No. 444). Very soon after his arrival in his diocese he issued a mandate (No. 61), requiring all the rectors and vicars in his diocese, and others having cures of souls, to be ordained to such orders as their cure required. This seems to have been only imperfectly obeyed. If the institutions for the first year of his pontificate in the important archdeaconries of York and Nottingham are tabulated, it will be found that in the former there were one subdeacon, 5 deacons, 3 priests, and one unspecified, and in the latter 4 subdeacons, 2 deacons, 4 priests, and 4 unspecified. Wickwane certainly strove to improve the condition of affairs. At Hemsworth (No. 60), he required the presentee to be ordained a priest, and removed the parson at Rampton (No. 212) for not having become one. Even in the case of a man of such importance as Baldwin Wake (No. 314), he refused to institute his presentee to Scrayingham as he had not been ordained a priest. Examples of the presentation of clergy in minor orders by religious persons are not wanting. The archbishop himself collated both a subdeacon and a deacon (Nos. 345, 361), and a deacon was provided by the pope (No. 420). It was in consequence of the ignorance and youth of so many of the presentees to livings that so many licences for study had to be granted. These were so numerous that there are special sections, entitled "Licencia" (see pp. 38, 84, 115, 129). The licencee had the option of studying in England or abroad, "citra mare vel ultra" (No. 39), but in one case (No. 204) Paris is specifically mentioned as the place of study.

Non-residence was another question which early engaged the archbishop's attention (No. 496). This matter, as well as plurality and orders, formed part of the inquiries always made at visitations (No. 382). Where possible, the presentee was compelled to resign any other living (Nos. 80, 187, 322, 348), unless he could shew a dispensation allowing him to retain it (No. 213). From two commissions to inquire into the subject of plurality (Nos. 316, 639), it would appear that many dispensations permitting non-residence were issued by the pope. A striking instance of Wickwane's determination to prevent improper persons being thrust into his diocese is afforded by No. 629, where he tells Lewis of Savoy that in spite of the application of the king, whose relation he was, he would not allow him to exchange the prebend he held in York Minster for another in a more convenient place. Against Wickwane's action with regard to Lewis of Savoy may fairly be placed his obsequious conduct on behalf of Napoleone (No. 464), probably a member of the Orsini. Nicholas III. was a member of the same family, so that the compliment to Napoleone was directly addressed to the pope. Giordano, through whom it was transmitted, was one of the Orsini cardinals who were imprisoned by the people of Viterbo in the conclave of 1281. (Gregorovius Gesch. Stadt Rom, Eng. Trans., v. p. 492).

There is little doubt that the form of inquisition, taken on the vacancy of a living (No. 555), was the same as in the time of Archbishop Giffard, in whose register there are many examples, but there is only one specimen in this register, that taken on the occasion of the vacancy of Weston in Nottinghamshire (No. 217). Criminous clerks were another source of trouble. As many persons took minor orders with the object of protecting themselves under the privileges thereby conferred, criminous clerks were not uncommon. One of these privileges was that persons in holy orders could only be tried in ecclesiastical courts, so when the justices itinerant came to try criminal cases, commissaries from the ordinary appeared to claim any clerics who might be put on their trial (Nos. 42, 200). Two conversi of Rufford Abbey were delivered by such commissaries from secular judges and handed over to the ecclesiastical jurisdiction (No. 234). The archbishop was keenly alive to the danger of persons leading a scandalous and vagabond life under the shelter of this privilege, and thus bringing discredit on the clerical character. To obviate this danger he ordained that, unless these clerks should attend school, they were not to look to him for help in their troubles (No. 741). On the other hand the archbishop sternly avenged any infringement of their privileges, as Robert de Berley (No. 122) found to his cost, who, in his capacity as king's bailiff, had executed certain clerks for robbery and other evil deeds.[1]

Cases of immorality, whether by clerks (Nos. 216, 310, 402) or laymen, were sternly punished. Penances, not mere money fines (Nos. 201, 203), were required of the penitents. A person of wealth and importance, like Simon Constable of Burton Constable, in Holderness, and Katherine of Weelsby, widow of John of Danthorpe, whom she was accused of having poisoned,[2] were forced to submit themselves to ecclesiastical censure for supposed immorality (Nos. 312, 340, 512), which seems to have been atoned for by a subsequent marriage (No. 707).

The Register gives a very clear idea of the way Wickwane discharged his duty as diocesan. The itinerary at the end of the volume shews his restless activity in visiting all parts of his diocese, though his movements were a good deal controlled by the necessity of frequently staying at his own manors, as Scrooby, Cawood, Bishopthorpe, Bishop Burton, and Bishop Wilton, where he was certain of finding board and lodging ready for him. Unlike Archbishop Giffard, he never left his province[3] from his entry in November, 1279, till the autumn of 1284, when he left it never to return. His duties were of a very miscellaneous nature. Caring for a recluse near Blyth (No. 235), who was poor and in bad health, and making inquiries about a nun of Nunburnholme (No. 308), who professed a desire to enter a stricter rule, and an order to the parishioners of Bilton-in-the-Ainsty to observe the anniversary of the dedication of their church, are examples. The Crusades, which had engaged a great deal of Archbishop Giffard's attention, are only mentioned in one document (No. 467). With a view of providing a resident clergy, vicarages were instituted at Birstall, Blyth, Mattersey, Sheriff Hutton, Silkstone, Walkeringham, and Whenby. The old quarrel, begun in Giffard's time, about the right of Bogo de Clare to the church of Adlingfleet, claimed by Master Robert of Scarborough, dragged on (Nos. 593, 627). Besides his canonry of York (No. 2), he obtained possession of the church of Settrington, on the presentation of Roger Bigod, earl of Norfolk, though with a proviso he should be ordained priest within a year (No. 372). He long remained an annoyance and a source of trouble in the diocese, and No. 718 gives a recital of his misdeeds in the church of York, apparently as treasurer,[1] at a later period. Richard de Vescy was another scandalous parson whom the archbishop endeavoured to eject from his living. Vescy had been presented to North Ferriby by Lady Agnes de Vescy in 1272[1], but for some reason he fell under Wickwane's censure and was excommunicated (No. 320). Master William of Cliff had been admitted in his place (No. 328), but his entry was forcibly resisted by Vescy and his accomplices, including his son Reginald (No. 329). He did not hesitate to fortify the church, and displayed great violence in expelling the lawful rector (No. 654). Ultimately some arrangement must have been come to, as William de Monceus and Thomas de Romenale were successively instituted to the church of North Ferriby on the presentation of Agnes de Vescy in the spring of 1282 (Nos. 364, 367). Probably Vescy was induced to resign Ferriby by a promise of Escrick, of which he obtained possession in July, 1282 (No. 411). He had already been instituted rector of Escrick under a dispensation for illegitimacy (No. 186), but the living had been sequestrated and he excommunicated (No. 393), and the church declared vacant (No. 730). From this last document it appears he also passed under the name of Kesham.

[3] There is one possible exception, a visit to London at the end of May, 1280 (p. 344). In both folios where the document occurs the place is written Lond', as if for London, though the scribe may have meant to write Loudham, now Lowdham, a village near Nottingham, in which county the archbishop was staying from May 26 till July 4 in that year.

The items in the accounts near the end of the volume give some small insight into the archbishop's character, and shew him in a milder aspect. He had sporting tastes and got his dogs, couchers, setters, from Normandy (No. 652). When he got them he made provisions both for them and their keeper (Nos. 660, 791). His wine came through Hull (No. 779), and was purchased from Hamund Box,[3] a great merchant there and in London (No. 823). He spent considerable sums on plate and jewels, 20 marks for a couple of pitchers (No. 837), and as much as 74li 7s 4d at one time on jewels (No. 878). St. Ives in Huntingdonshire and Boston were the two fairs at which purchases were made. Wickwane conferred one great benefit on the see of York by the gift of a large head of stock, 602 oxen, 54 horses, and 1,000 sheep, to be kept on the lands of the see, with a proviso that it should be handed on intact by each succeeding archbishop (No. 719).

Full as this register is compared with that of Archbishop Giffard, it by no means records all his activity. Stubbs[1] tells us that Wickwane devoted especial care to see that all the churches in his diocese were duly dedicated. The dedication of only two churches, Loweswater and Lancaster (Nos. 386, 391), both situated in the archdeaconry of Richmond, is mentioned, although there must have been many undedicated churches, as one of the questions at visitations was whether there were any such churches in the archdeaconry (No. 382). From other sources[2] we know that Wickwane dedicated the parish church of Sheffield about 1286, and the abbey church of St. Mary, York, and the parish church of Gilling-in-Ryedale in 1283, but of this nothing is said in the register.

The archbishop as early as the winter of 1282 was hoping to go to Rome, but was prevented by business (No. 922). As time went on this desire grew stronger. No doubt the labours and worries of his office, and the dispute with Durham, told upon him, although in some few cases he was able to ease himself by the employment of Scotch bishops[3] to perform some of his duties. In the summer of 1284 he was able to make arrangements for leaving England. On May 31 in that year he had letters of protection from the king to last three years,[4] and on June 25 he nominated Master Robert of Tadcaster and Hugh of Stapleford as his attorneys to represent him whilst abroad.[5] The exact date of his departure from England is uncertain, or whether he ever reached Rome.[1] Archbishop Peckham heard in December, 1284, that Wickwane was then at Pontigny, and gave orders that he was to be prevented carrying his cross erect through the province of Canterbury as he was expected to attempt before long.[2] Pontigny, a Cistercian Abbey, north of Auxerre, in Burgundy, was one of the earliest off-shoots of Citeaux. The sojourn there of Thomas Becket after his quarrel with Henry II. about the constitutions of Clarendon, and the tomb of St. Edmund Rich of Canterbury,[3] who had died in 1240 at Soisy-en-Brie, close by, had made the place holy for Englishmen. The only information we have of his movements in 1285 is that he dated a document at Pontoise, north of Paris, on Feb. 23.[4] He certainly returned to Pontigny, where he was seized with a mortal illness,[5] according to the Lanercost Chronicler,[6] a fever. The date of his death was the 26th or 27th of August, 1285.[7] His obsequies

[1] The Dunstaple chronicler Annales Monastici iii. (323), says his death took place at Pontigny on the way to Rome, which is confirmed by the Lanercost writer (Chronicon de Lanercost, 122).

[3] The shrine of St. Edmund, an 18th century piece of work, is still above the high altar at Pontigny with the greater portion of the saint presumably still in it. There are two pictures of it in F. Bond's English Gothic Architecture (1905), p. 187, and another in J. C. Wall's Shrines of English Saints. His arm is still preserved in the crypt at Vézelay. The parish church at Sedgefield, near Stockton, and a chapel at Gateshead shew that St. Edmund was revered in the north of England. At Gateshead there was a hospital dedicated to St. Edmund the king as well as one to St. Edmund the bishop. See Script. Tres, p. cccciv., and Knowles and Boyle's Vestiges of Old Newcastle and Gateshead, p. 296. On Oct. 12, 1285, the king ordered the sheriff of Kent to pay to the abbot and convent of Pontigny twenty marks yearly out of the farm of the city of Canterbury to maintain four candles in the church of Pontigny, burning round the tomb of St. Edmund the Confessor, pursuant to the charter of Henry iii., which the king has inspected (Calendar of Patent Rolls (1281-1292) p. 196).

P. 316. No. 760. Graham is now called Grantham, the church of which, in two medieties, was annexed to two prebends in Salisbury Cathedral.

P. 316, l. 10 from bottom. For Orrieto read Orvieto.

P. 318, l. 19. Wrlîn, in the diocese of Hereford, is probably Worthen, Cherbury Hundred, Salop, and in the old deanery of Pontesbury, Ludlow archdeaconry, S. W. of Shrewsbury. It is not far south of Alberbury (so spelt in Pope Nicholas's Taxation), and is now in Montgomery deanery. A possible alternative is Eardisland, Stretford Hundred, in Herefordshire, and Leominster deanery, Hereford archdeaconry. This takes the form Erleslen' in Pope Nicholas's Taxation, and becomes Erislonde in the Valor Ecclesiasticus. The name was evidently only known orally to Wickwane and his registrary.

P. 339, side note. Blidworth is between Southwell and Mansfield, not far from Newstead Abbey, which is in the parish of Blidworth. The land between Blidworth and Rufford is still forest-land, and there is a regular crop of Robin Hood legends which have their centre at Blidworth. The hundreds of Broxtow, Thurgarton, and Calverton, are all in the neighbourhood of Blidworth. Rayngwath, now Rainworth, is 1½ miles east of Blidworth.

P. 341 No. 933. Byssemede, now Bushmead, near St. Neots (Hunts.), but itself over the Bedfordshire border, was a prior of Black Canons. The site of the house of the Preaching Friars at Cambridge is occupied by Emmanuel College.

P. 343, col. 2. April 28, May 1, 1280. Holm is probably Holme-on-Spalding Moor, near Market Weighton, and Neusum, Newsholme, in the parish of Wressle, two miles N. W. of Howden.

P. 345. May 19, 1281. This was Monday before Ascension Day, and had been appointed by the archbishop (No. 383) for his visitation of Coupland deanery at Waberthwaite and Muncaster. It looks as if this could have been held more conveniently between the 3rd and the 10th; but it would have been quite possible for him to have left Hornby on the 17th or 18th, have got through his visitation early on the Monday, and returned to Hornby along Morecambe Bay in the afternoon and evening. It would have been a longish journey; but, tide allowing for the passage of the Duddon or the Kent, quite possible on a long May day. May not the length of daylight also allow for Grenton (June 19) being Grinton in Swaledale?

Folios 1, 97.

1. W.. permissione divina Eboracensis archiepiscopus, Anglie primas, universis presentem paginam inspecturis salutem in Domino sempiternam. Notum vobis facimus per presentes quod magister R. de Scharthebürge, archidiaconus Estriding', in nostra constitutus presencia, apud West-monasterium, in manerio nostro, die Lune ante festum Omnium Sanctorum (Oct. 30), anno Domini M°CC°LXX° nono, petiit a nobis, cum convenienti instancia, confirmacionem eleccionis de se facte in decanum ecclesie nostre Eboracensis. In cujus rei testimonium sigillum nostrum presentibus est appensum. Dat. die et loco supradictis.

Confirmation of the election of Master R(obert) of Scarborough as dean of York.

2. W., miseracione, etc., dilecto in Christo filio, domino B. de Clara, canonico Eboracensi, salutem, graciam, et benediccionem. Quia intendimus in octabis S. Martini (Nov. 18), ubicumque fuerimus in diocesi nostra, examen eleccionis nuper facte de persona magistri Roberti de Scartheburge in decanum Eboracensem, quatenus de jure ingruit[2], inchoare; tibi presentibus nunciamus quatinus, si quid canonicum tibi competat contra eleccionem ipsam, illud tunc, si expedire perpenderis, in lucem proferas et proponas, quia nemini justiciam indigne denegabimus, Deo dante. Vale. Dat. apud [Wautham].

Notice to B(ogo) de Clare, canon of York, to make objections, if any, to the election.

3. W., miseracione, etc., dilectis in Christo filiis, capitulo Eboracensi, salutem, etc. Quia [examen eleccionis] vestre, facte de persona magistri Roberti de Scharthebürge in decanum [vestrum, intendimus per Dei adjutorium in] Verumptamen, discrimina litium attendentes, videtur nobis quod, si in formam illam quam elegistis possetis descendere et cum adversariis convenire, licet aliquantulum diminuatur de jure vestro, satis posset tollerari pro bono pacis, et adhuc possetis mitigare verbum illud, "approbemus vel reprobemus quod attenderimus ordinatum," per adjeccionem aliquam, prout poterit cum adversa parte sine graviori prejudicio conveniri. Quod, autem, vobis optulit magister Willelmus non videtur nobis conveniens sub ea forma, maxime quia videtur velle veritatem occultari, si non fiat inquisicio singularis, et quod per totam diocesim forma hujusmodi habeatur, ita quod cathedralis ecclesia nullam prerogativam habeat in hac parte. Intendit, enim, ita dividere ut vos laborem habeatis et paretis fructum episcopo laboris vestri. Visitation of Selby abbey.

75. Visitacio et comperta apud Seleby. Anno ab incarnacione Domini M°CC°LXX° nono, sexto idus Januarii (Jan. 8, 1279-80), visitacione et inquisicione factis in monasterio de Seleby, tam in capite, quam in membris, per nos, Willelmum, Misdeeds of the abbot. Dei gracia, etc., compertum est quod abbas Thomas ejusdem monasterii regulam S. Benedicti non observat; missam non cantat; non predicat; non informat; capitulum raro intrat; correcciones non facit, ut tenetur; in refectorio[1]

raro comedit; in dormitorio nunquam jacet; chorum raro ingreditur; raro audit matutinas extra lectum; infirmos non visitat; carnibus publice vescitur coram laycis in maneriis suis, et alibi extra septa monasterii sui, et eciam in monasterio suo quartis feriis indistincte; fratribus suis contumeliosus est et injuriosus; rixosus et tumultuosus in conventu; statuta sanctorum patrum, archiepiscoporum, omnino contempnit nec observat; et breviter in omnibus divinis officiis, et in hiis que spectant ad regularem disciplinam, necligens et male se habens; et est incorrigibilis omnino. Item, abbas alienavit, absque consensu conventus sui, terras, maneria, decimas, possessiones, et pensiones ac corredia, videlicet, manerium de Chelleslawe[1], manerium de Stantone[2] ubi sunt xiiij carucate[3] terre, terram que fuit Johannis de Seleby, terram que vocatur Reddrindg'[4], Auiz reding', Langereding', quas tres ultimas terras dedit fratri suo Johanni; pensionem iiii° marcarum, quam dedit Thome, nepoti suo; corredium Willelmi de Wistowe. Item, decimam de Duffelde et pecuniam pro predictis alienacionibus receptam consumpsit pro voluntate sua. Item, compertum est [quod[5]] per necligenciam suam amisit firmam de Mideforde, decimam de Agrum, firmam de Stayngtone, decimam de Cunneby[6]. Item, libertates in villa de Snayth. Item, compertum est quod maneria domus tradidit custodienda consanguineis suis, garcionibus et rybaldis, et, cum per manus eorundem pecuniam receperit pro bladis et aliis, ipsam consumit pro voluntate sua, absque compoto reddendo conventui. Item, compertum est quod obedientiarios ponit pro voluntate sua, et sibi favorabiles; de quibus pecuniam et alia bona domus cum receperit, ea consumit ubi vult, sine consilio conventus sui et compoto reddendo. Item, compertum est quod nemora [s]cindit, vendit, pecuniam consumit ubi vult. Item, abbas notatur de incontinencia cum domina de Queneby, et cum filia Bodeman manentis ad portam monasterii, de qua suscitavit prolem, ut dicitur; pro qua adhuc pendet purgacio sibi indicta per archiepiscopum jam defunctum. Item, compertum [est] quod est perjurus, quia juratus ante installacionem suam ultimam quod cartas de Stallyngburghe, statim cum fuerit installatus,

He has alienated the property of the convent.

restituereet, et adhuc non restituit. Item, compertum est quod abbas est excommunicatus, tum quia decimam domini pape non solvit, et, si quam aliquando solvit, suis terminis non solvit; tum quia decimam capelle de Wytelay,[1] assignatam ad elemosinam, sentencia lata in contravenientes, in usus alios convertit; tum quia non observavit, set omnino contempsit, statuta Walteri, Eboracensis tunc archiepiscopi, pro quibus sentencia lata est in contravenientes; tum quia manus violentas injecit in fratrem Robertum de Eboraco, sanguinem extrahendo, et in Willelmum de Stormeworthe ipsum de choro extrahendo, item in Thomam [de] Snayth, clericum, extrahendo sanguinem ab ipso, cui pro redempcione quasdam decimas apud Snayth assignavit. Item, compertum est quod abbas procuravit Elyam Fauuelle, incantatorem et sortilegum, ad querendum corpus fratris sui defuncti, submersi in aqua de Use, propter quod expendit magnam pecunie summam, et ex predictis causis excommunicatus immiscuit se divinis.

Also for using witchcraft to recover his brother's body from the Ouse.

Deposition of the abbot.

In[2] Dei nomine, Amen. Auditis et intellectis meritis visitacionis et inquisicionis, per nos, W., Eboracensem archiepiscopum, Anglie primatem, factarum in monasterio de Seleby, tam in capite, quam in membris; quia invenimus per deposiciones fratris Thome, abbatis dicti monasterii, necnon per deposiciones confratrum suorum, dictum Thomam in officio divino et spiritualibus penitus negligentem, dilapidatorem, excommunicatum, perjurum, irregularem, ac ad regimen monasterii inpotentem, et omnino incorrigibilem, et alias immeritum, dictoque monasterio dampnosum, ipsum, in ejusdem Dei nomine, ab administracione et regimine dicti monasterii, pontificali auctoritate, ammovemus, justicia exigente; statuentes eundem Thomam ad monasterium Dunelmense transmittendum, ad penitenciam super commissis, ad salutem anime sue, ibidem salubriter peragendam; ac ipsum in predicto monasterio Dunelmensi moram facturum, donec de persona sua aliter duxerimus ordinandum. Ego, Thomas de Qualle,[3] monachus de Seleby, coram vobis venerabili patre, W., Dei gracia, etc., die Martis proxima post festum Epiphanie, anno Domini M°CC°LXX° nono, (Jan. 9, 1279-80), personaliter constitutus, Visitation of Selby abbey.

75. Visitacio et comperta apud Seleby. Anno ab incarnacione Domini M°CC°LXX° nono, sexto idus Januarii (Jan. 8, 1279-80), visitacione et inquisicione factis in monasterio de Seleby, tam in capite, quam in membris, per nos, Willelmum, Misdeeds of the abbot. Dei gracia, etc., compertum est quod abbas Thomas ejusdem monasterii regulam S. Benedicti non observat; missam non cantat; non predicat; non informat; capitulum raro intrat; correcciones non facit, ut tenetur; in refectorio[1]

[1] Reffectorio. Fo. 105.

raro comedit; in dormitorio nunquam jacet; chorum raro ingreditur; raro audit matutinas extra lectum; infirmos non visitat; carnibus publice vescitur coram laycis in maneriis suis, et alibi extra septa monasterii sui, et eciam in monasterio suo quartis feriis indistincte; fratribus suis contumeliosus est et injuriosus; rixosus et tumultuosus in conventu; statuta sanctorum patrum, archiepiscoporum, omnino contempnit nec observat; et breviter in omnibus divinis officiis, et in hiis que spectant ad regularem disciplinam, necligens et male se habens; et est incorrigibilis omnino. Item, abbas alienavit, absque consensu conventus sui, terras, maneria, decimas, possessiones, et pensiones ac corredia, videlicet, manerium de Chelleslawe[1], manerium de Stantone[2] ubi sunt xiiij carucate[3] terre, terram que fuit Johannis de Seleby, terram que vocatur Reddrindg'[4], Auiz reding', Langereding', quas tres ultimas terras dedit fratri suo Johanni; pensionem iiii° marcarum, quam dedit Thome, nepoti suo; corredium Willelmi de Wistowe. Item, decimam de Duffelde et pecuniam pro predictis alienacionibus receptam consumpsit pro voluntate sua. Item, compertum est [quod[5]] per necligenciam suam amisit firmam de Mideforde, decimam de Agrum, firmam de Stayngtone, decimam de Cunneby[6]. Item, libertates in villa de Snayth. Item, compertum est quod maneria domus tradidit custodienda consanguineis suis, garcionibus et rybaldis, et, cum per manus eorundem pecuniam receperit pro bladis et aliis, ipsam consumit pro voluntate sua, absque compoto reddendo conventui. Item, compertum est quod obedientiarios ponit pro voluntate sua, et sibi favorabiles; de quibus pecuniam et alia bona domus cum receperit, ea consumit ubi vult, sine consilio conventus sui et compoto reddendo. Item, compertum est quod nemora [s]cindit, vendit, pecuniam consumit ubi vult. Item, abbas notatur de incontinencia cum domina de Queneby, et cum filia Bodeman manentis ad portam monasterii, de qua suscitavit prolem, ut dicitur; pro qua adhuc pendet purgacio sibi indicta per archiepiscopum jam defunctum. Item, compertum [est] quod est perjurus, quia juratus ante installacionem suam ultimam quod cartas de Stallyngburghe, statim cum fuerit installatus, restitueret, et adhuc non restituit. Item, compertum est quod abbas est excommunicatus, tum quia decimam domini pape non solvit, et, si quam aliquando solvit, suis terminis non solvit; tum quia decimam capelle de Wytelay,[1] assignatam ad elemosinam, sentencia lata in contravenientes, in usus alios convertit; tum quia non observavit, set omnino contempsit, statuta Walteri, Eboracensis tunc archiepiscopi, pro quibus sentencia lata est in contravenientes; tum quia manus violentas injecit in fratrem Robertum de Eboraco, sanguinem extrahendo, et in Willelmum de Stormeworthe ipsum de choro extrahendo, item in Thomam [de] Snayth, clericum, extrahendo sanguinem ab ipso, cui pro redempcione quasdam decimas apud Snayth assignavit. Item, compertum est quod abbas procuravit Elyam Fauuelle, incantatorem et sortilegum, ad querendum corpus fratris sui defuncti, submersi in aqua de Use, propter quod expendit magnam pecunie summam, et ex predictis causis excommunicatus immiscuit se divinis.

Also for using witchcraft to recover his brother's body from the Ouse.

Deposition of the abbot.

In[2] Dei nomine, Amen. Auditis et intellectis meritis visitacionis et inquisicionis, per nos, W., Eboracensem archiepiscopum, Anglie primatem, factarum in monasterio de Seleby, tam in capite, quam in membris; quia invenimus per deposiciones fratris Thome, abbatis dicti monasterii, necnon per deposiciones confratrum suorum, dictum Thomam in officio divino et spiritualibus penitus negligentem, dilapidatorem, excommunicatum, perjurum, irregularem, ac ad regimen monasterii inpotentem, et omnino incorrigibilem, et alias immeritum, dictoque monasterio dampnosum, ipsum, in ejusdem Dei nomine, ab administracione et regimine dicti monasterii, pontificali auctoritate, ammovemus, justicia exigente; statuentes eundem Thomam ad monasterium Dunelmense transmittendum, ad penitenciam super commissis, ad salutem anime sue, ibidem salubriter peragendam; ac ipsum in predicto monasterio Dunelmensi moram facturum, donec de persona sua aliter duxerimus ordinandum. Ego, Thomas de Qualle,[3] monachus de Seleby, coram vobis venerabili patre, W., Dei gracia, etc., die Martis proxima post festum Epiphanie, anno Domini M°CC°LXX° nono, (Jan. 9, 1279-80), personaliter constitutus, Mandate from the papal penitenciary to the archb., enjoining him to see that Robert de Berley, guilty of beheading certain clerks, whilst king's bailiff, performs this penance, that he, with only breeches on, cause himself to be flogged by the priests of the churches to which the clerks belonged.

122. Venerabili in Christo patri,...Dei gracia archiepiscopo Eboracensi, salutem frater Nicholaus, domini pape penitenciarius, in Domino. Robertus de Berley, laycus, vestre diocesis, lator presencium, nobis exposuit quod, cum olim quidam clerici, latrones et malefici, cum aliis latronibus, laycis, in suis maleficiis deprehensi fuissent et capti, ac pro suis excessibus laicalis justicia condempnasset eos ad mortem, idem R., tunc custos regius seu ballivus, qui sua potencia et auctoritate regia illos quos clericos esse sciebat potuit eripere de manibus laicorum et vobis vel vestris officialibus tradere, reservando vitam eisdem, ecclesiastica libertate contempta et humanitatis gracia deposita, conniventibus oculis pertransiens, immo neci eorum consenciens, decollari permisit eosdem, propter quod predecessor vester, tanquam prelatus providus et discretus, ne tanta inmanitas pertransiret inulta, et ne seculares judices, qui frequenter in clericos conculcando libertatem ecclesie debaccantur, factum tam execrabile assumerent in exemplum, nisi animadvers[i]o debita sequeretur, ipsum R., tanquam reum homicidiorum hujusmodi et excommunicacione majori ligatum, ad Sedem Apostolicam destinavit; quare supplicavt humiliter sibi super hoc per Sedem eandem misericorditer provideri. Nos, igitur, prefatum R., a reatu hujusmodi et excommunicacione quam ex hoc incurrit, ac peccatis suis aliis, ad vos, auctoritate domini pape, remittimus juxta formam ecclesie absolutum ; mandantes eidem, sub debito prestiti sacramenti, ut per omnes majores ecclesias loci, in quo dicti clerici decollati fuerunt, nudus et discalciatus, braccis dumtaxat retentis, virgas ferens in manibus, si secure poterit, incedat, et ante fores ecclesiarum ipsarum a presbiteris earum, psalmum penitencialem dicentibus, se faciat verberari, quando major in eis aderit populi multitudo, suum publice confitendo reatum. Ecclesiis, autem, quarum minstri erant clerici memorati, satisfaciat competenter. Et, si aliquid feudum ab ipsis habuit ecclesiis, vel jus patronatus in eisdem optinuit, ipse et ejus heres illis perpetuo sint privati. Vos, autem, considerata culpa ipsius, injungatis ei penitenciam que sibi sit ad salutem et aliis ad terrorem. Quod si predictam [penitenciam] facere contempserit, ipsum in pristinam sentenciam reducatis. Dat. HIC INCIPIT ANNUS TERCIUS.

Notice of the ordination of John of Colston by Oliver Sutton, bp. of Lincoln. 250. 7 idus Junii (June 7), 1281, anno 2. Huntingdone. Pateat universis per presentes quod per nos, O., permissione divina Lincolniensem episcopum in celebracione ordinum nostrorum, die Sabbati Quatuor Temporum in septimana Pentecostes ultimo preterita, Johannes de Colstone, rector ecclesie de Westone, Eboracensis dyocesis, optenta prius diocesani sui licencia, ordinatus extitit rite in sacerdotem. In cujus rei testimonium has litteras nostras sibi fieri fecimus patentes.

idem Willelmus et sui, visis presentibus, eosdem fructus vobis et vestris liberent requisiti, et hoc per has litteras eis injungimus et mandamus. Valete.

302. Correcciones facte apud Bridelingtone. Ad honorem et laudem Altissimi, et in nomine individue Trinitatis deifice, Amen. Nos, Willelmus, etc., visitacionis et inquisicionis officium in monasterio de Bridelingtone, tercio kal. Feb., anno Domini M°CC°LXX° nono (Jan. 30, 1279-80), soliciti[1] excercentes, pleraque corrigenda ibidem[2] comperimus que ad cultum et incrementum divini obsequii, necnon ad firmiorem observanciam regule et ritus ipsius ordinis et monasterii, sic duximus reformanda. In primis injungimus et precipimus, sub attestacione divini judicii, quod elemosina monasterii in usus illicitos, contra Deum et regulam, amodo nullatenus convertatur, set fidelius et commodius solito per custodes ipsius amodo conservetur et debite distribuatur, ad meritum tanti collegii et honorem ; ita quod nullus, sine licencia superioris ad quem pertinet, se de eadem mittenda vel minuenda aliquatenus intromittat. Item, precipimus quod nullus decetero, absque causa infirmitatis racionabili, in infirmariam se mittat, nec confingat se ad Dei obsequium impotentem. Quod, si per priorem evidencius sit inventum, secundum regulam et modum culpe protinus puniatur. Caveat, insuper, prior ne aliquem confratrem decetero licenciet incedendi per patriam vel visitandi benivolos vel parentes, nisi causa necessaria vel saltim utilis subsit pariter et honesta ; ita quod exitus licenciati in scandalum non cedat monasterii, vel labem proprietatis aut aliquod vicium non inducat. Item, cistas suspectas inhibemus districcius cum seruris[3]. Precipimus, eciam, et injungimus quod statuta predecessoris nostri, in hiis que regule et sanctorum patrum decretis non dissonant, firmiter observentur ; quod prioris industrie, moderamini, et consciencie ad presens relinquimus coram Deo. Provideat, insuper, idem prior quod dormitorium in tecturis et aliis necessariis sine more dispendio [reparatur].[4] Item, ne canonici in maneriis vel alibi, in perniciem fame sue, soli morentur, et maxime apud Blouberhous[5], ubi inhonesta multi multociens suspicantur. Item, precipimus quod divine laudis preconia districte fiant, et nullatenus, quod absit, amodo sicut actenus sincopando.

Mandate to the dean of Holderness to publish the excommunications of Simon Constable and Katherine, widow of John of Danthorpe.

Symonem Constabularium propter contumaciam suam et offensam excommunicavimus, justicia exigente; quocirca tibi mandamus quatinus eundem S. in nostra cathedrali ecclesia Eboracensi, ac in singulis ecclesiis parochialibus ejusdem civitatis, per decanum Christianitatis ejusdem loci, pulsatis campanis, accensis candelis, statim post lectum Evaungelium,[1] astante parochianorum multitudine, singulis diebus, festivis et non festivis, usque in octabas Pasche, et post easdem octabas singulis diebus Dominicis et festivis, excommunicatum denuncies solempniter vice nostra. Ad hec, Katerinam, relictam J. de Danthorpe, defuncti, propter suam contumaciam[2] multiplicatam, eadem auctoritate et eadem solempnitate, per te et per alios locis memoratis excommunicatam denuncies publice nostra vice, inhibens ac inhiberi faciens omnibus et singulis, ne eisdem in casu non permisso communicare presumant quoquo modo. Et circa execucionem hujusmodi sic te exhibeas diligentem, quod te de necligencia, ne dicamus de contemptu, arguere non possimus. Hoc idem, eciam, per omnes archidiaconatus nostre dyocesis per injuncta tua facias vice nostra celeriter publicari. De execucione, vero, hujusmodi, per te et per alios in forma qua premittitur rite facta, in synodo nostra Eboracensi proximo celebranda, nos, etc.

Mandate directed to the same that Constable, having been absolved, the publication was not to be made.

15 kal. Maii, anno 1, (April 17 1280). Burtone. Suo decano de Holdernesse. Et dominum S. Constabularium, militem, pro offensa pariter et contumacia excommunicacionis sentencia auctoritate nostra dudum innodatum, ac status sui reformacionem a nobis humiliter postulantem, a sentencia hujusmodi in forma juris absolvimus, justicia exigente; quocirca tibi mandamus quatinus execucionem hujusmodi sentencie, quam per te publicari mandavimus, non est diu, supersedeas[3] omnino; et, si sentencia ipsa in locis aliquibus fuerit publicata, in locis eisdem eundem Symonem vice nostra denuncies publice absolutum. Absolucionem hujusmodi locorum archidiaconis per dyocesim constitutis tuis litteris nuncias, si forsan execucio ipsa eisdem archidiaconis sit injuncta.

Ad recentem propter [s]celeris enormitatem admissi memoriam reducentes, meminimus modo tibi, officialis, tibi nonnuncquam, decane, nostris dedisse litteris in mandatis ut super intrusione quam Ricardus de Vescy in ecclesia de Feriby, nostre diocesis, sue salutis inmemor, minime aggredi verebatur, publica vicinie fama in ipsum conclamante, adeo ut raros vel nullos latere potuit quod sic notorie commisit, diligenter inquireretis ex habundanti; vocatis qui fuerint evocandi; nosque super premissis et nominibus rei fautorum principalium legitime redderetis cerciores. Ecce, licet vestrum certificatorium in hac parte aliquamdiu expectaverimus, tandem, vestra exigente necgligencia que excusari nequit, ut attendimus, ex quoquo velamine conficto, ad locum ipsum personaliter declinavimus sic compulsi. Officii, igitur, nostri debitum prosequentes, super notorietate[3] intrusionis predicte per viros fidedignos, canonico adhibito moderamine, inquisivimus, sicut decuit, ad plenum. Per quam quidem inquisicionem, solempniter publicatam, invenimus evidenter quod dictus Ricardus de Vescy, propria temeritate fulcitus, in ecclesiam ipsam ausu nephario se intrusit, quibusdam dampnabilis secte sequacibus cooperacionis auxilium prestantibus eidem; quorum nonnullos in sanctuario ipso ecclesiasticum in castri munimen, sicut propriis oculis conspeximus, e[r]ronee convertentes, manu invenimus ab inicio armata. Rebelles, verum, quos ad ecclesie unitatem redire videbamus paratos, admisimus, eis, pena pro commissa inposita canonica, humiliter insistentes. Quocirca vobis mandamus quatinus predictum Ricardum, 336. Item mandatum fuit decano de Herthille quod Johannes le Rendu optinuit graciam absolucionis apud Kirtelingtone, xiiij° kal. Novembris (Oct. 19, 1280); ita quod, receptis ab eo xs., tres recipiat disciplinas circa ecclesiam de Feryby, et a singulis presbiteris tui decanatus in pleno loci capitulo vapuletur. Similar mandate to the dean of Harthill about John le Rendu.

337. 5 idus Nov. (Nov. 9, 1280). Burtone. Suo decano de Herthille. Quia Johanni de Dayncort, clerico, optentu Dei et pretextu parentele sue, contulimus fructus ecclesie de Bruneby jam existentes ibidem in grangia, salvo sequestro nostro in rebus ceteris exterius, eo quod infra annum juxta Lugdunense Concilium in presbiterum non extitit ordinatus; volumus quod sine perturbacione qualibet hec nostra gracia sibi liberaliter compleatur; et hoc officiali nostro Eboracensi et ceteris ministris nostris tenore presencium nunciamus. Mandate to the same to allow John de Deyncourt to receive the fruits of Burnby. Fo. 19d.

338. 18 kal. Dec. (Nov. 14, 1280). Burtone. Henrico de Saundeforde, presbitero. Accepimus, et pro vero didicimus et dolemus, quod magister P., rector ecclesie de Bayntone, adeo senectute et senio confringitur quod nec persone sue seu rerum debite conservacioni sufficit, nec diutinis obsequiis, pre impotencia et adversa valetudine sui, valet intendere sicut rector. Unde, de tua sanctitate et industria confidentes, curam predicti rectoris et rerum, ad eundem et ecclesiam suam pertinencium, una cum singulis juribus eorundem, tibi committimus per presentes donec aliud ordinaverimus de premissis; volentes quod omnimodam rerum dilapidacionem et consumpcionem ibidem decetero totis viribus destruas et repellas. Appointment of Henry de Sandford as curator to the rector of Bainton.

339. Idibus Nov. (Nov. 13, 1280). Burtone. Decano de Herthille. Mandamus tibi quatinus omnia bona ecclesie de Feriby, que per Ricardum de Vescy et suos fuerint subtracta, et ibidem in villa, necnon et in manerio suo de Waldeby[1], prout intelleximus, receptata, debita celeritate sequestres et sub tuta custodia conserves, donec aliud a nobis receperis in mandatis; contradictores et rebelles per censuram ecclesiasticam compescendo. Prayer by the patron for the admission of John of Thorpe, the new prior.

Littera patroni. Reverendo patri suo in Christo, domino W., permissione, etc., suus R. de Ros salutem et debitam cum omni devocione reverenciam. Quia dominum Johannem de Thorpe ad regimen domus de Wartria, ad instanciam supprioris[1] et conventus ejusdem loci, quantum in nobis est, admisimus, paternitati vestre humiliter supplicamus et devote quatinus eundem ad regimen dicti prioratus benigne, si placet, admittere velitis. Valeat pia paternitas vestra semper in Christo.

The archb. quashes the election of John of Thorpe as prior, but provides him to the same and orders the canons to obey him.

14 kal. Jan. (Dec. 19, 1280). Thorpe. Suppriori[1] et conventui de Wartria. Oblatam nobis eleccionem vestram de fratre Johanne de Thorpe, canonico vestro, nuper celebratam, inspeximus et per singula examinavimus diligenter, ut est moris ; verum, quia ipsam absque decreto et aliis juris obsequiis[2] de facto invenimus attemptatam ac canonicis obviam institutis, deliberato consilio eleccionem eandem, ipsius eleccionis vicio non persone, cassavimus ac irritam nunciavimus, justicia exigente. Sane quia eundem fratrem J., in spiritualibus providum, in temporalibus circumspectum, in regulari disciplina instructum, ac virtutibus alias comperimus insignitum, congregacioni vestre piis compacientes visceribus, eundem J. in prefate ecclesie de Wartria priorem prefecimus, et eidem ecclesie de ipso ex gracia providimus speciali. Quocirca devocioni vestre mandamus quatinus ipsum priorem vestrum, sic per nos canonice institutum, reverenter admittentes, eidem decetero obedienter in omnibus intendatis. Bene valete.

Mandate to the official to sequestrate the fruits of the church of Escrick, held by Ric. de Vescy, excommunicated.

[4] There is now no parish, or even place, with a similar name in the archdeaconry of Cleveland. The church of Lengeby or Lengheby was in the patronage of the abbot and convent of Whitby, and is identified by Canon Raine with Ingleby Greenhow (Archbishop Gray's Register, pp. 103, 309). This seems to be an error, as this latter church was not a rectory. There is no mention of any place resembling Lengeby in the Whitby chartulary. Slingsby, also called Slingesby, which was a rectory, was in the patronage of Whitby.

CORRECCIONES CLAUSTRALES IN ARCHIDIACONATU EBORACENSI.

Visitation of Healaugh Park.

427. Ad preconium et honorem unici et venerandi filii Dei, nos, W., permissione, etc.,[1] visitacionis et inquisicionis officium in prioratu de Parco, v idus Maii (May 11), anno Gracie M°CC°LXXX°, propensius excercentes, defectus, quos ibidem reperimus, paterna affeccione correximus in hunc modum. In primis, igitur, precipimus, in virtute et visceribus Salvatoris, quod regula Beati Augustini et statuta felicis recordacionis Godefridi, predecessoris nostri, que corditer approbamus et in principio cujuslibet mensis recitari decernimus, pronis et votivis viribus observentur. Volumus, eciam, ad honorem religionis et regule, quod indumenta et calciamenta per communem ministrum monasterii decetero cuilibet, secundum quod convenit et fieri possit, congrue ministrentur, pecuniaria distribucione penitus rejecta. Item, quod canonici soli quacumque causa nullatenus emittantur, nec in obsequiis magnatum qualitercumque commorentur. Inhibemus, insuper, ne canonici extra claustrum, vel alias inhoneste, et maxime post completorium, potacionibus cum hospitibus, vel aliter vane, vacent. Item, injungimus omnibus et singulis de conventu, ne in boscis adjacentibus, vel alibi, nimis spaciose, sicut fieri consuevit, ulterius spacientur; set nec ibi, nec alibi, nisi necessaria causa subfuerit et de licencia presidentis. Volumus, eciam, et decernimus quod neque corredia, neque alia onerosa seu dispendiosa domui, amodo quomodolibet concedantur. Necessarium, eciam, et decens reputamus quod silencium suis locis, temporibus, et terminis, sanccius solito observetur. Volumus, insuper, quod ministri monasterii ab incautis contractibus et steriles exitus procreantibus deinceps precaveant, preteritis dispendiis premuniti. Precipimus, eciam, quod compotus rerum monasterii reddatur evidencius annuatim. Item, ne carnes secundis et quartis feriis, contra exigenciam regule, a robustis et sanis amodo comedantur. Item, la[s]civos[2] et indiscretos discursus canonicorum intus et extra septa monasterii, sub obtestacione divini judicii, firmiter inhibemus; precipientes quod prior et conventus de competenti et sollicito suppriore sibi provideant indilate, officia domus intus et extra per industrios, fideles, et mundos debite et utiliter conservando, sicut Dei et nostram voluerint

Junii (May 16), anno Gracie M°CC°°LXXX, in prefato monasterio sollicite et pro viribus excercentes, ea, que correccione et reformacione digna reperimus, ad limam rectitudinis redigimus in hunc modum. In primis, igitur, injungimus, in virtute et visceribus Redemptoris, quod regula Beati Augustini votive pro viribus, unacum nostris explanacionibus que sequuntur, ab omnibus observentur. Item, quod prior, consilio et assensu sui conventus et gremii, in cunctis arduis prejudicialibus, et maxime in communibus periculis, studeat discrecius inherere, nec suspectorum consilio, sicut hactenus, ad communem perniciem pervertatur. Item, precipimus quod prior conventum suum decetero in choro, capitulo, claustro, dormitorio, et refectorio, secundum observancias regulares, viriliter sine ficcione qualibet comitetur; omnes et singulos, per collaciones et exhortaciones, ad caritatem veram et solidam sepius excitando, in loco et regione sui regiminis, sicut pastor providus, absque vagis discursibus commorando. Item, precipimus quod omnes officine domus fideles habeant obedienciarios, industrios eciam et discretos, de quibus sinistra suspicio non debeat suboriri[2]. Injungimus, eciam, priori, in virtute obediencie et sub pena canonice districcionis, quod familiam suam a contumeliis, conviciis, oblocucionibus, et injuriis monasterii, modis omnibus decetero temperet et castiget. Item, ordinamus et injungimus districcius coram Deo, quod omnes canonici divino officio, sine desidia et dissimulacione quacumque, firmiter adhereant et intendant. Et si quis in ecclesia vel infirmaria vanam impotenciam vel infirmitatem confinxerit, a consorcio protinus expellatur, nec in cibariis vel quibuscumque necessariis procuretur, donec se correxerit, sicut decet. Precipimus, eciam, quod nulla littera sigillo communi amodo sigilletur, nisi in presencia tocius conventus, ita quod tenor singulis innotescat, et ab omnibus, vel a majori et saniori parte, primitus comprobetur, ut sic sinistras

Eidem, eciam, priori omnem confederacionem malicie cum malivolis monasterii, et rixosas ac ineptas reprehensiones confratrum, in presencia saltem laicorum, sub honoris sui periculo, firmiter inhibemus; volentes quod tamen in loco convenienti et secreto eosdem corripiat et castiget. Injungimus autem eidem, in virtute et vinculo sue professionis, ut circa regimen spiritualium et conversacionem temporalium diligencius et circumspeccius solito se excerceat circumquaque, ita quod regula et statuta predecessorum unacum hiis adjeccionibus nostris, in silentio suis locis et temporibus, ac in ceteris consuetis et debitis observanciis, rite pro viribus observentur, ne ipsius, vel cujusquam rebellio, nos ad severitatem excitet ulcionis. Ordinamus, insuper, et decernimus quod frater Willelmus de Snayth,[1] nuper supprior ejusdem loci, officio supprioratus, et cujuslibet alterius officine vel cure, penitus dimisso, contemplacioni claustrali jugiter inmoretur, ut se consortibus et fratribus suis discat temporancius et suavius sociari, adeo quod torpore seu adhesione lectuli a grege et consorcio amodo non discrepet quoqo casu; set sit quietus non clamosus, abstinens non delicatus, pudicus non inverecundus in verbis vel operibus, sitque ceteris socialis et conformis, prout regula evidencius persuadet, ne oporteat membrum tam discrepans et informe a cetu collegii, ad sui desolacionem perpetuam, resecari. Item, decernimus et ordinamus quod Hugo de Rykhale,[2] ob inhonestas et verecundas contenciones ipsius et varias perturbaciones quas frequenter facit, ad inquietacionem conventus, claustro et conventui in ultimo gradu sacerdotum continuo adhereat, et silenter se habeat conformiter et quiete, ita quod nullum sibi officium seu solempnis honor monasterii aliquatenus deputetur, sine assensu nostro expressius preoptento. Item, quia inordinato esu carnium et albi tempora salutis et abstinencie idem Hugo sepius deformavit, volumus et decernimus quod diebus Dominicis hoc anno carnibus non utatur, nisi cum eodem ex causa digne disponamus micius operari; set nec in infirmaria diebus quibuscumque, nisi infirmitas vel alia legitima causa subsit. Item, Johannem de Weland, laicum, a sustentacione et servicio monasterii, propter varia ipsius demerita, penitus amovemus, et ipsum priori et conventui excommunicatum et evitabilem nunciamus, pro eo quod in Laurencium de Lincolnia, canonicum, manus injecit temere violentas; nec est adhuc rite, ut[1] recepimus[2], absolutus. Item, Elyam, canonicum, qui violenter percussit Johannem de Lincolnia, concanonicum suum, nec adhuc absolvitur, ut comperimus. Hunc subicimus legitime absolutum penitencie salutari; videlicet, quod singulis diebus usque ad festum Omnium Sanctorum in pleno capitulo se Deo coram eodem J. devote humiliet et prosternat, ipsius Johannis et tocius conventus preces et instancias erga Deum corditer implorando. Precipimus, autem, priori quod carolam cujuslibet bis in anno, sub congruo testimonio, aperiat et scrutetur, et inibi inventa communibus usibus deputet et assignet. Post generale, eciam, completorium commessaciones et potaciones omnino interdicimus vere sanis, nisi in presencia prioris aliud evidens necessitas vel utilitas introducat. Calefacciones et dissoluciones illicitas circa ignem in infirmaria quibuscumque temporibus totaliter prohibemus. Vendiciones corrediorum et eciam aliorum quorumcumque sine licencia nostra non fiant decetero aliquo modo. Per consanguineos autem prioris, vel ipsius speciales, nolumus monasterium indebite onerari; per hoc tamen opus pium elemosine communi et unanimi non interdicimus voluntati. Item, injungimus quod ad siccandum braseum citra festum Sancti Michaelis (Sept. 29) morem fidelem recolligant et honestum. Item, inhibemus firmiter coram Deo ne quisquam canonicorum vel fratrum, pro negociis extraneorum promovendis, pecuniam recipiat vel mercedem, sicut retro temporibus fieri consuevit. Penam et punicionem conventus, pro multiplici reatu eorundem, quem ad presens comperimus, sub spe plene correccionis et sanccioris observancie, adhuc differimus cum favore, ut secundum merita et devocionem repertam graciam et dulcedinem inposterum coaptemus.

The bishop, prior, and convent of Durham to appear on June 25, 1281, in the cathedral, to be visited.

manu publica retinemus, diu est, dederimus in mandatis, ut se in crastino Sancti Johannis Baptiste, hoc instanti anno Gracie M°CC°LXXX° primo, cum effectu pararent, officium visitacionis nostre, quam ipsis in basilica sedis ejusdem cum omni dulcedine suavi impendere cordi quamplurimum nobis erat, secundum juris exigenciam recepturos. Ecce, nunc, post adventum nostrum in partibus istis, ex frequenti relacione fidelium audivimus pro constanti, quod quamplures iniquitatis filii, sedentes in insidiis ac solum versantes in manibus et corde maligno dolos et obices per comenta, non solum extraneas et incognitas immunitates singulares, contra universalem et notoriam ordinariam jurisdiccionem nostram, ac eciam contra generalem universalis ecclesie consuetudinem et morem omnium metropolitanorum ubilibet observatum, pro libito suo subdole et falso confingunt, solam diuturnitatem temporis invalidam, et nullam aliam causam vel titulum aliquem allegantes; se eciam erecta cervice et animo infrunito,[1] contra visitacionem nostram et nostri excercicium officii, contumaces ausu sacrilego per nephas et obstacula actualia preparant et rebelles, in grave animarum suarum periculum ac ecclesiastice libertatis et metropolitani juris nostri prejudicium manifestum. Quoniam, igitur, exempla presencium cavere nos premonent in futurum dantibus occasionem huic processui et facto nostro, preteritis quorumdam culpis et offensis, de quibus per litteras, mandata dicta, et facta, certas conjecturas verisimiliter optinemus, nos, jus et libertatem ecclesie nostre et nostrum, de quo certi sumus, armis quibus possumus spiritualibus defendere intendentes, auctoritate Dei Patris Omnipotentis, ac gloriose Virginis Marie, et Beati Petri Apostoli, patroni nostri, omnes illos et singulos, qui visitacionem, jurisdiccionem, et officium nostrum, in predictis et circa ea, modis predictis vel aliis, per maliciam, aut fraudem, vel injuriam, hactenus impediverunt, seu impediri fecerunt, aut decetero impediverint, seu impediri fecerint vel procuraverint, facto vel verbo, litteris vel nunciis, clam vel palam, per se vel alium, consilio, auxilio, consensu, favore, vel alias quoquo modo, nisi infra octo dies, pro trina monicione computandos a tempore noticie hujus processus nostri, resipuerint penitentes, et animo prono fideliter et cum effectu satisfaciendi nobis de injuria hujusmodi destiterint a presumptis, in hii scriptis solempniter et publica auctoritate metropolitica excommunicamus,

463. Kal. Aprilis (April 1), 1280. Burtone. Letter from the archbishop to Pope Nicholas III., telling him how Master Adam de Hales, official of the archbishop of Canterbury, had assaulted him and broken the cross which he was bearing erect through the province of Canterbury, and praying for justice. (Printed in Letters from Northern Registers, p. 60).

464. Burtone ut supra. Reverendo et precordiali in Christo patri, domino J[ordano], Dei gracia Sancti Eustachii diacono cardinali, suus devotissimus sacerdos, W., eadem gracia Eboracensis ecclesie minister humilis, Anglie primas, seipsum totum et cum continua oracionum instancia votivam reverenciam et honorem. [5] Hugh of Evesham was created a cardinal on March 23, 1281. Died in 1287. He had held the rectories of Welton and Hemingbrough (Giffard's Register, 56, 57), been a canon of York (No. 4) and archdeacon of Worcester (Le Neve's Fasti, iii. 74). He owed his archdeaconry to Godfrey Giffard, bishop of Worcester, archbishop Giffard's brother, and it is probably in this way he became beneficed in the diocese of York. 518. 16 kal. Junii (May 17, 1281). Horneby. Suo officiali. Thesaurus et bravium nostrum sunt, sicut scitis, fama nostra et consciencia post hanc vitam; quod quidam miseri, misere nobis ministrantes, suis propriis commodis inhiantes, non avertunt. Ecce, igitur, presentibus interclusa, que famam nostram lamentabiliter lacerant et animam aggravant sic scribentis, sed, pre pigricia majorum nobis intendencium, nos solum soli Deo committimus ne ruamus. Nonne enim nostra regitis negocia, et semper deprope contra maliciosos et malicias militatis, et tot sinistra sub tanta segnicie[1] sustinetis? Nonne duo equi eque sufficerent officiali, apud quemcumque hospitanti, sicut semper fieri consuevit? Sed nunc, sicut perpendimus, ad miserimam[2] mensam mendicantis innumerosi corruunt, sicut corvi. Amoveatur, igitur, apparitor, preparatus ad predam, et compleatur ejus officium per decanum, sicut extitit hactenus observatum. Idem, eciam, decanus in suo decetero decanatu sit sine quavis injusta sevicia sequestrator, et superfluitas ministrorum indebita undique debite deleatur, ne improperia deinceps sub inchoatis tediis abbrevient dies nostros. Et, pro amore Crucifixi, nostram puram voluntatem et propositum propensius ponderetis, quia inmunes non eritis, si fama nostra in infamiam convertatur. De littera vestra, presentibus interclusa, gaudium non concipimus, sed merendi materiam, nisi cesset.

Dunelm. xiiij° kalendas Februarii, A.D. M°CC°LXXIX° (Jan. 19, 1279-80). Universis presentes litteras inspecturis vel audituris, magister Willelmus de la Corner, domini pape capellanus, salutem in Domino sempiternam. Noverit universitas vestra quod, cum placeat venerande religionis viris, dominis priori et conventui Dunelmensibus, unanimiter consencientibus quod ecclesia mea de Scypwyth, in qua jus patronatus habere dinoscuntur, in ecclesia de Houedene, ordinacione reverendi patris, domini W., etc., interveniente, prebenda efficiatur et ibidem in numero prebendarum perpetuo computetur; ego, eorum in omnibus voluntatibus condescendere et consensum imitari desiderans, id ipsum, quantum in me est, concedo ac ordinacioni dicti domini Eboracensis archiepiscopi me totaliter in hac parte submitto; ratum habens et firmum quicquid predictus dominus archiepiscopus, tam de statu dicte ecclesie de Scypwyth, quam de porcione perpetui vicarii, preficiendi in eadem, statuendum duxerit, ordinandum, seu providendum. In cujus rei testimonium sigillum meum duxi presentibus apponendum. Dat. apud Claketone, vj kalendas Januarii (Dec. 27), A.D. M°CC°LXXIX°. Nos, igitur, inspectis et intellectis submissionibus et consensu prescriptis, de expresso capituli nostri Eboracensis consensu, In nomine domini nostri Jesu Christi ordinamus, et ordinando statuimus, quod dicta ecclesia de Scypwyth in ecclesia de Houedene sit prebenda imperpetuum, et ibidem in numero prebendarum computetur et jure prebende censeatur; et quod dicte prebende prebendarius, qui pro tempore fuerit, habeat suis sumptibus presbiterum ydoneum, in dicta ecclesia de Houedene in habitu canonicali ministrantem, secundum quod alii ejusdem ecclesie habent canonici; eidem prebendario tercium locum ex parte boriali in choro assignantes; ita, tamen, quod de proventibus magni altaris, qui quinque canonicorum usibus nunc tantummodo deputantur, sibi, absque voluntate et consensu eorundem expresso, nichil penitus valeat vendicare. Volumus, eciam, et ordinamus quod dictus prebendarius in prebenda predicta de Scypwyth perpetuum habeat vicarium, ibidem personaliter residentem, qui circa curam vigilet animarum; cui vicario, ad sui sustentacionem congruam, assignamus omnes obla-

682. 4 kal. Aprilis (March 29, 1280-1). Cawode. Prayer to the king for the caption of a Selby monk, who was excommunicated. Serenissimo et precordiali domino suo, E., etc. Excellencie vestre non absque cordis tedio nunciamus quod Willelmus de Stormesworthe, monachus de Seleby, nostre dyocesis, auctoritate nostra dyocesana, pro sua multiplici offensa et apostasie[1] vicio excommunicacionis sentencia involutus, in eisdem sentencia et apostasia, velut vagus, incorrigibilis, et discurrens, jam per annum et amplius pertinaciter perduravit, claves ecclesie dampnabiliter contempnendo. Quocirca dominacioni vestre attencius supplicamus quatinus, ad reformacionem et reduccionem ovicule sic errantis, per litteras capcionis consuete nobis, ad Dei et honorem ecclesiasticum succurratis; spiritualem impotenciam temporali et regia ad vestri meritum supportando. Conservet, etc.

683. Amantissimo et excellentissimo domino suo, E., To the king, announcing the success of his action against the men of Beverley, etc., W., etc., salutem et prosperos ad Dei beneplacita semper successus. Vestra, si placet, satis recolit reverencia, et eventui nostro, quin pocius Dei disposicioni, vos ipsi, sicut didicimus, congratulantes intime congaudetis, quod contra seviciam et rebellionem Beverlacensium jus nostrum nuper evicimus jure regni, de quo vobis graciose retribuat graciarum omnium Omnipotens Retributor. Set, ecce, domine precordialis et karissime, gaudio nostro sic concepto vehemens jam doloris acerbitas admiscetur, dum perversitas aliquorum, Deum non timencium, vos per figmenta et fallacias, in subversionem nostram, immo ipsius Dei viventis negocii, circumvenienter circuit excitare. Verumptamen who are still deceiving the king.

[1]Appostasie. Fo. 189.

quia dictum negocium, non tam pro sancta Dei ecclesia quam honore regio, transiit sic discussum, in misericordia Dei et vestra votive spem affiximus, quod nos, licet parum hucusque meruimus, quod dolemus, contra detractores nostros coram vobis saltem optentu Dei supportabitis velud vestrum, quia quicquid de invidis illis contigerit vester erimus et merito firmissime et infallibiliter juxta vires. Ceterum scripsistis nobis noviter et recenter qua supersedeamus capcioni quorundam Beverlacencium; quod quidem mandatum cum summa reverencia recepimus et obedienter complebimus, sicut gratus, ne, quod absit, ingratitudinem committamus. Set, ecce, domine predilecte, diu ante receptionem mandati vestri, omnia loca nostre provincie ecclesiastico fecimus supponi judicialiter interdicto, ad que illi, in vestro brevi contenti, videlicet, R. filius Sabine et Robertus Ingelberd, diverterent et moram facerent in eadem, et illud interdictum, ad securitatem tocius provincie, ne morbo quisquam inficiatur eorundem, adhuc frequencius recitatur. In totam, enim, provinciam Eboracensem, ad cujus subversionem perpetuam cucurrerunt per appellaciones suas, interjectas ad tuitionem Sedis Cantuariensis, inhumaniter et turpiter deliquerunt. Set de vituperiis, contumeliis, conviciis, et injuriis, que nobis, archiepiscopo et domino suo ligio, effronter et letaliter intulerunt, sicut audivistis, et inferri procurarunt, penitus subticemus; sperantes et expectantes quod redeant ad emendam. Et de hoc interdicto, si placet, ad quorumcumque strepitum turbari non debetis vel offendi, set nos in hoc Dei beneplacito principis dextera confovere. Per illos enim duos tantummodo, qui rebelles ecclesie remanent et degeneres, fides ceterorum minuitur et vacillat, quibus est intime condolendum. Si quid, igitur, dominacioni vestre displiceat in hoc facto, quod avertat Altissimus, nobis injungatis plenius velle vestrum, quia Deo et vobis studebimus, quatenus sufficimus, complacere; set vobis displicuisse non credimus, neque Deo. Datum, etc.

Ad vestrum, pater dilectissime, unicum et singulare in regia curia subsidium in singulis agendis confidentissime recurrentes, vobis innotescimus quod, licet ecclesiam de Silkestone per consecracionem venerabilis patris, Menevensis Episcopi,[2] diu est, vacantem, lapsis temporum consuetis presentacionis faciende curriculis, dilecto

To the bp. of Bath and Wells.

The church of Silkston, vacant by the consecration of the bp. of St. David's conferred on Sir Roger of Malton, had been intruded into by monks from Pontefract.

[1]Ralph de Ireton, bishop of Carlisle, had been prior of Guisborough before his elevation to that see.

[2]Thomas Beck was consecrated bishop of St. David's on Oct. 6, 1280 (Le Neve's Fasti, I., 292). He had also held the livings of All Saints', Pontefract, Castleford, and Welton (Giffard's Register, 21, 31, 289).

filio, domino Rogero de Maltone, quondam magistro hospitalis Beati Leonardi Eboracensis, ad aliqualem reparacionem ruine quam patitur, ut nostis, repentine desolatus, auctoritate Concilii nuper contulerimus, intuitu caritatis. Ecce, nonnulli indevocionis filii, sub umbra habitus regularis vitam agentes irregularem, monachi, videlicet, de Pontefracto, cum suis complicibus, hujusmodi collacioni nostre se fraudulenter opponentes, ecclesiam ipsam in multitudine armatorum, Dei sanctuario minime deferentes, non sine intrusionis vicio, irreverenter hiis diebus occuparunt, et, in nostri et ecclesie nostre Eboracensis prejudicium et contemptum, dampnabiliter sic detinent occupatam. Hinc est, cum ecclesiastice censure vigor ad reprimendam eorum insollenciam sufficere nequeat in premissis, paternitati vestre intimis visceribus duximus supplicandum quatinus, ea que domino regi nostro scribimus in hac parte favorabiliter prosequentes, remedium super istis, ob[1] solum Deum cujus negocium agitur, adhibere dignemini oportunum. Alias quidem scripserat dominus rex vicecomiti Eboracensi pro laicali potestate amovenda, quod attendentes monachi, amota vi laicali, sese in multitudine armatorum monachorum, videlicet, et clericorum, in regii elusionem mandati, hujusmodi potencie terribiliter subrogarunt, ac ecclesiastice discipline auctoritatem contempnentes, spretaque professionis religiose honestate, taliter possessioni ejusdem ecclesie incumbunt, plusquam laici, proch dolor, sevientes contra Deum. Huic malicie provida, pater, occurrere velitis cautela, domino regi et regine, quos prefato Rogero, in solacium note depressionis ejusdem, ne in sacerdotalis ministerii obprobrium, post meritorii laboris sui cursum, cui regia succedit magestas, contra debitum pietatis officium, in ultimis jam diebus mendicare miserabiliter cogatur, favere estimamus, si placet, seriatim exponentes, ut post hujusmodi vite resolucionem premium eternaliter reportare valeatis pro labore sic impenso.

capis sericis et aliis, nec fracta turribula, prout convenit, reparantur. Incensum, cera, et cerei deficiunt temporibus oportunis. Campane, in campanili minus legitime[1] locate, cardas non habent, nec est orologium ecclesie sub debito regimine custoditum. [Fenum et juncci et herba more solito non prestantur.] Illi eciam qui subthesauriam nunc gerit suisque ministris consueta stipendia subtrahuntur. Libri ecclesie, custodia carentes debita, quatenus indigent, minime reparantur. Item, palle et ornamenta ecclesie, que certis anni temporibus appendentur parietibus ad honorem, custodiuntur pessime adeo quod culcitris de serico, que ad ornamentum similiter deputantur, custos vester in lecto suo et hospicio, tam Eboraci quam in remotis alibi, quod detestabile cernitur, est abusus. Item, ejusdem vestri custodis ministri ornamenta ecclesie et alia que ad cultum ecclesie deputantur mulieribus, in puerperio decubantibus, illisque nubentibus, ad suos ornandos thalamos, satis lascivo libito[2] tradiderunt. Item, iidem nocturno tempore exierunt ecclesiam contra sacramentum prestitum, clavibus ecclesie sine custodia derelictis. Item, inter se pacem vestri non habent ministri, quinimmo ita conflixerunt adinvicem in domo thesaurarie [hoc] Sabbato Sancto Pasces, quod [in ipsis] maximum scandalum patiebatur ecclesia, et extitit civitas tota mota, quod est [proculdubio] nimis notum. Nec est silendum quod ob ipsorum ministrorum defectum, ut de protervia taceamus [ex cogitato], predonum incursu debuit aliquando ecclesia spoliari. Et, ut in summa brevibus concludamus, omnia onera consueta et debita, ad thesaurariam pertinencia, penitus contempnuntur. An in eterne salutis dispendium discutiat intelligens et attendat. Preterea prefati ministri in contribucionibus ordinariis et extraordinariis quibuscumque ecclesie onera non agnoscunt; et si fructus thesaurarie propter hoc per capitulum sequestrentur, sequestra hujusmodi effronter violant contempnendo. Poscimus itaque quatinus, premissa mente pensantes sollicita, ea faciatis, [vane promissionis morositate suspensa], cum sceleritate congrua efficaciter emendari; alioquin dissimulare nolumus, sicut nec possumus, quin in proximo domini nostri regis adventu, cujus interest quod sui patronatus ecclesia statutis non fraudetur obsequiis, ei prescripta singula et alia revelacione veridica revelemus. iniciata sinceritas[1] commissis vobis collegiis in presenti proficiat et posteris floridis pululare incrementis. Et quidem, dum conformem devocionem inprimere cupimus, deformitatis materiam necessarium censuimus amputare. Que, itaque, apud regulares deformitas probrosior, quam inter eos, qui ejusdem se asserunt religionis cultores, diversorum rituum singulares observancias confovere? Nunquam religiose condicioni congruit quod[2], dum pars professionis, licet diversorum cenobiorum canonici, nonnunquam conveniunt, in horis canonicalibus exsolvendis varia senciunt, et hic suum, cum socium non intelligat, alterius abusui ridiculose proponit. Nunquam religiose y[n]demnitati convenit quod tam nuncupacione regulari, dum hic, videlicet, dominus, alius vero frater appellatur, quam in calciamentorum pompositate, dum equitant, acceptatur disparitas[3] apud eos. Profecto quanta ex hiis ordini scandala proveniant, quantaque obprobria subsequantur, facilime (sic) attendere poterit oculus animi sagaciter intuentis. Horum proinde consideracio nostrum interpellat affectum ut nos, qui, hoc dudum attenta meditacione pensantes, operosum adhibuimus[4] studium ut uniformitatem debitam quo ad premissas disparitates solide pararemus, non desistamus acceptis, set reddamus vos paterna monicione solicitos quatinus in hoc generali capitulo vestro sic prospere agatis pro viribus, quod inter se vota vestra non discrepent, set vicaria promptitudine quasi in unum alveum congesta, ad reparacionem premissorum conveniant concorditer et subsistant. Usuum, igitur, diversitates, apud vos hactenus reprobe acceptatas, ad unicum usum compendiosum in hac vestra congregacione studiosius redigatis. Et quia usum ecclesie nostre Eboracensis communiter credimus[5] convenire, usum ipsum in singulis conventibus vestris statuatis decetero observandum; alias disparitates quaslibet, quibus hucusque, non sine ordinis vestri vituperio, adhesistis, ad pares observancias per singula circumspeccius revocantes. Ex hoc, siquidem, ordinis reverencia augebitur, et concors adicietur familiaritas ac futuris temporibus placida inter fratres. Si qui, vero, huic commode provisioni nostre duxerint resistendum inprobe, nos, ad denunciacionem presidencium, quibus hoc firmiter injungimus, eorum conatus demeritos curabimus, disponente Domino, prompcius refrenare. Mandate from Pope Nicholas iii. to the archb., to hear the complaint of the parishioners of Knayton about services due from the rector of Leake.

726. 10 kal. Oct., anno 2, (Sept. 22, 1279). Viterbii. Nicholaus, episcopus, servus servorum Dei, venerabili fratri, Eboracensi archiepiscopo, salutem, graciam, et benediccionem. Sua nobis parochiani capelle de Knayuetone peticione monstrarunt quod, licet rector ecclesie de Leke, qui est pro tempore, tue dyocesis, teneatur in capella ipsa de antiqua, et approbata, et hactenus pacifice observata consuetudine ter in ebdomada missarum solempnia celebrare, certis propter hoc ab ipsis parochianis eidem ecclesie redditibus assignatis; tamen magister W., rector predicte ecclesie, id facere indebite pretermittit, quamquam idem rector redditus cum integritate percipiat memoratos, propter quod iidem parochiani paciuntur defectum non modicum in divinis. Unde petebant a nobis ut rectorem ipsum, quod in eadem capella premissis diebus divina hujusmodi celebret, vel quod eis redditus restituat memoratos, compelli per discretum aliquem faceremus. Quocirca fraternitati tue per apostolica scripta mandamus quatinus partibus convocatis audias causam, et, appellacione remota, debito fine decidas; faciens quod decreveris per censuram ecclesiasticam firmiter observari. The collation to all ecclesiastical benefices appertains to the Pope, especially to those of persons dying at Rome.

738. Licet ecclesiasticarum dignitatuum, personatuum, aliorumque beneficiorum ecclesiasticorum plenaria disposicio ad Romanum noscatur pontificem pertinere, ita quod solum ipse cum vacant potest provide conferre, verumque jus in ipsis tribuere vacaturis, collacionem, tamen, ecclesiarum, personatuum, dignitatuum, et beneficiorum, apud Sedem Apostolicam vacancium, specialius ceteris antiqua consuetudo Romanis pontificibus reservavit. Nos, itaque, laudabilem reputantes hujusmodi consuetudinem et eam auctoritate approbantes, ac nichilominus volentes ipsam inviolabiter observari, eadem auctoritate statuimus ut ecclesias, personatus, dignitates et beneficia, que apud Sedem Apostolicam deinceps vacare continget, aliquis preter Romanum pontificem, quacumque super hoc sit auctoritate munitus, sive jure ordinarie potestatis episcoporum eleccio, provisio, seu collacio ad eam pertineat, sive litteras super aliquorum provisionibus generales, vel eciam speciales, sub quacumque forma receperit, nisi ei sit super conferendis eisdem in Romana Curia vacantibus specialis et expressa ab ipso pontifice auctoritas attributa, conferre alicui vel aliquibus non presumat. Nos, enim, si secus actum fuerit vel attemptatum, illud irritum cernimus et inane.

Rescript allowing the diocesans to present after a month.

Statutum felicis recordacionis Clementis Pape iiii[ti], predecessoris nostri, de dignitatibus et, beneficiis, in Curia Romana vacantibus,[1] nequaquam per alium pontificem conferendis decernimus taliter moderandum ut hii, ad quos eorundem beneficiorum et dignitatu[u]m spectat collacio, statuto non obstante predicto, demum post mensem, a die quo dignitates seu beneficia ipsa vacaverint numerandum, ea conferre valeant tantummodo per se ipsos, vel ipsis

Pope Martin IV. to the prior of the Friars Preachers, London, and the dean and archdeacon of Leicester to confirm the excommunication of the commonalty of Beverley by the archb.

744. 8 idus Maii, anno 2, (May 8, 1282). Apud Urbem Veterem. Martinus episcopus, etc., dilectis filiis, priori Fratrum Predicatorum London., ac decano et archidiacono Leycestrie in ecclesia Lincolniensi, salutem, etc. Significavit nobis venerabilis frater noster, archiepiscopus Eboracensis, quod, cum ipse ad villam de Beverlaco, Eboracensis dyocesis, temporaliter et spiritualiter sibi subjectam, accederet, ut in ecclesia ipsius ville, prout officii sui debitum exigit, populo, sue cure commisso, proponeret verbum Dei, Rogerus de Tykeshulle et Ricardus Sabine, clerici, Robertus Ingelberti, Ricardus Inglays, layci, ac universitas ejusdem ville, vesano ducti spiritu, multiplicatis tumultibus et conclamacionibus, laxato conviciorum freno, in dictum archiepiscopum, patrem et pastorem eorum, in publico conspectu, ut est moris, ad predicandum paratum, escandere ceperunt effrontes, adeo quod, licet idem archiepiscopus omnes et singulos predictos per frequentes moniciones pio solicitare niteretur affectu, ut ab insolenciis hujusmodi conquiescerent, et eciam resilirent, quia, tamen, iidem inpetuosius, quod horribiliter inchoarant, tanquam aspides surde, obscurantes aures suas, maligno continuato processu, in Dei et ipsius archiepiscopi vituperium non modicum et contemptum, in tantum pertinaciter persistere presumpserunt, quod idem archiepiscopus in ecclesia ipsa sue predicacionis officium prosequi aut exequi non valuit, immo pocius illud deserere est coactus, propter quod memoratus archiepiscopus quia clerici et laici, ac universitas predicta, Fo. 86. super hoc moniti diligenter, satisfacere contumaciter denegarunt, cum nichil racionabile proponerent quare hoc facere non deberent, et id esset ita notorium quod nulla poterat tergiversacione celari, in clericos etlaicos predictos auctoritate ordinaria excommunicacionis in villam ipsam [et] interdicti sentencias promulgavit; quare dictus archiepiscopus nobis humiliter supplicavit, ut hujusmodi sentencias robur faceremus firmitatis debitum optinere. Quocirca discrecioni vestre per apostolica scripta mandamus quatinus sentencias ipsas, sicut racionabiliter sunt prolate, facias auctoritate nostra usque ad satisfaccionem condignam, appellacione remota, inviolabiliter observari. Quod si non omnes hiis exequendis potueritis interesse, duo vestrum ea nichilominus exequantur.

[1] In No. 96 the Archbishop dates a document at Bishopthorpe on this day, probably erroneously.
[2] In the parish of Kirkham. Called Wyueton in the Register, and also formerly Witheton. A seat at one time of the Irish Butlers. [3] Near Lancaster, called Bemund' in the Register.
[4] Overkellet, where was a mansion and estate belonging to the archdeacon of Richmond and glebe of Bolton-le-Sands (Gale's Registrum Honoris de Richmond). [5] Near Hornby.
[6] Probably an error for Grenhou, now Ingleby Greenhow, close to Busby, unless Grinton in Swaledale is intended. [7] Ten miles N.W. of Rothbury.

APPENDIX IV.[1]

NOTICE OF THE DISCOVERY OF ARCHBISHOP WICKWANE'S TOMB AT PONTIGNY IN 1689.

Vous voyez, Messieurs, que l'église de Pontigny, toute minée qu'elle soit, est encare remplie de restes précieux sous tous les rapports. Je ne doute pas que de nouvelles recherches ne mettent à jour d'autres objets d'un égal intérêt ; tels, par exemple, que les vases sacrés et autres insignes ecclésiastiques enterrés dans le cercueil de Guillaume de Ludom, archevêque d'Yorck, du xiii[e] siècle, qu'un p ocès-verbal de l'an 1669 constate exister dans le sanctuaire.

Ce proces-verbal, transcrit dans le troisième volume de l'histoire manuscrite de l'abbaye de Pontigny, qui est conservée dans l'église de ce lieu, porte : " le 8 avril, 1669, nous, frère Jacques de la Varande, prieur, sur l'avis qui nous a été donné par Nicolas Lejeune, maître tailleur de pierres et entrepreneur de bâtiments, demeurant à Tanlay-Emery, et travaillant en ce lieu, sur la nécessité qu'il y avait de faire lever une tombe dans le presbytère de nostre église, pour unir le pavé d'icelui, nous ayant fait voir au-dessous de ladite tombe qui étoit autrefois converte d'airain avant le pillage de la maison par les Huguenots, et qui est au milieu du presbytère, au-dessous de la lampe du grand autel, distant de la première marche dudit presbytere d'environ 9 ou 10 pieds, un cercueil de plomb de près de 2 pieds en carré et de 6 de long, enchassé dans un cercueil d'une seule pierre, au dedans duquel cercueil de plomb se sont trouvés les ossements d'un prélat, derrière le chef duquel est une lame de plomb où sont écrits ces mots : Hic jacet Guillermus Eboracensis Archiepiscopus Angliæ primas, à côté dextre desdits ossements étoit un petit calice et patène d'argent doré, au coté gauche, une crosse de cuivre doré et un anneau d'or qui était dans l'ossement du doigt, où est gravé á l'entour ave Maria gracia plena ; et autour du chef, de petites feuilles d'argent doré, qui ont servi d'ornements à la mitre, etc." La toute de la pièce n'indique pas qu'on ait rien retiré du tombeau.

[1] Extract from an article entitled "Notice sur les Tombeaux qui existent dans l'église de Pontigny." printed in the "Bulletin de la Société des Sciences Historiques et Naturelles de l'Yonne" (p. 283), printed at Auxerre in 1847. The writer of the article has confused Archbishop William Wickwane with his predecessor Archbishop Godfrey Ludham.
